FOREWORD

More and more people, than ever, since the beginning of history, being motivated either for patriotic, religious, pride or social reasons, are discovering the immense joy and satisfaction that accompanies even the smallest success in tracing his or her family roots. Many hours are subject to be expended with no information being located as well as thousands of miles traveled with but little success and varying degrees of expense. Most United States family roots have their beginnings on the eastern shores or coast of North America and followed by migrations into the wilderness accompanied by untold hardships. Many genealogists are able to trace their ancestors back to the European Countries of their origin.

The first American Census was in 1790 when only the heads of families were listed. It was not until the 1850 Census that all members of the family were listed by name, hence tracing ones' ancestors becomes quite arduous unless the researcher has some Christian names as well as surnames to trace back to their arrival in America. It has been customary, it appears, that succeeding generations have a tendency to use the same or similar Christian names which might be of some help in tracing ancestry.

The purpose of this booklet is merely to put into printed form all of the pertinent information gleaned from available material by this author and preserve as much information as possible for posterity by including such living conditions, social customs, historic data of the local area as well as means of recreation along with some idea of life's hardships during some periods of time. There are many research guides and references available for research such as the Census records, old church records, cemetery records, old family Bibles and histories, military records, land grants, county deed and marriage records, estate records, wills of probate courts as well as numerous other sources. Many important records for posterity have been lost or destroyed by fire, wars, family feuds and jealousy. No attempt has been made to make this report exhaustive. Detailed information is being left to the discretion of anyone who wishes to pursue it.

Many miscellaneous records are being included in this offering that will, hopefully, be of value to someone. In this record of charts, the family blood line is always listed on the top line in each rectangle of the charts, thereby simplifying the following up of the successive generations. Most of the people named in this report have lived and died in Walton, Santa Rosa and Okaloosa (formerly a portion of Walton and Santa Rosa) Counties together with a small portion of South Alabama adjacent to the three counties.

FAMILY NAME AND ARMS

People took as surnames the names of flowers (Lilly, Rose), animals (Fox, Bears), place names (Hill, Wood), occupational names (Taylor, Smith), and Christian names (Gilbert, Richards). Still another source was nicknames, of which Campbell is one example. It denoted a man who had a crooked or distorted mouth, from the Gaelic words came, "crooked," and beul, "mouth."

Nicknames functioned differently from other types of names. While other surnames identified an individual by information such as his occupation, his location, or his family, a nickname sought to relate something about the person's appearance or his essential character. Probably the most natural way to name a person was by a one-word description of his appearance, particularly if the person had some unusual or outstanding physical feature.

"Cameron," another well-known Scottish name, comes from the words meaning "crooked nose," while the Irish name Kennedy refers to an ugly or misshapen head. Other names which were derived from a person's physical features include Reed, "The red-haired or ruddy person" and White, "The light or fair-complexioned person or one with white hair."

It is possible, though, that the "crooked mouth" of the Campbells' ancestor referred to a moral trait, i.e., lying, rather than a physical one. Often people were labeled with a derogatory name, either in jest or in earnest. The name Coot brings to mind the bird of the same name, which is known for its stupidity. "Pettiford" denoted an iron-footed, or slow person. "Royster" was applied to a blustering bully, and "Prout" was a proud and arrogant man.

Because of the evolutionary nature of name development, it is virtually impossible to pinpoint the exact date of the formation of any new name. Campbell, of course, is no exception. The first to assume the surname Campbell is said to have been Duncan MacDwine Campbell around the eleventh century. He was a descendant of Constantine, who emigrated from France in 404 A.D.

The Scottish name Campbell is found predominantly in the central part of the country and is most abundant in the shires of Fife, Forfar, Perth, Stirling, Dumbarton, and Argyll. By the time of the first census in America in 1790, many Campbell families had settled in this country. The average Campbell household had 5.5 members and census records indicate that there were more Campbell heads-of-households living in Kentucky, North Carolina, and New York than in any other part of America. Official United States records compiled in 1974 indicate that in that year Campbell was the 41st most frequently occurring surname in the nation. Today there are approximately 362,000 adult Americans named Campbell.

A HISTORY OF COAT ARMOR

Though authorities may differ as to details, it is generally believed that the use of coat armor began during the twelfth century. Historical research indicates that the use of coat armor developed simultaneously throughout much of Europe and in Great Britain. In an age of poor communication, this is an anomaly which may be explained by the occurrence of the First Crusade in A.D. 1097 - an historical event of great significance in that it brought together for the first time in medieval history a large and diverse number of young, influential military and political leaders from all of Europe.

Amid the fanaticism which swept the Continent, this army marched off to Asia Minor to confront the Turkish Saracens and return the Holy Land to Christendom. However, these European knights were greatly surprised and distressed to discover that their enemy employed military strategies and techniques far superior to anything previously seen in Europe. Using large armies and freewheeling field tactics, the Turks routed the best of European knighthood.

On their return to Europe, the Crusaders apparently recalled the technical superiority of the Turks and determined that one of the key elements in that superiority was the use of various insignia painted on the shields of the Asian warriors. Such insignia, in fact, were designed specifically to identify the Turkish allies and maintain order in the ranks amid the swirling chaos of large-scale battles.

Within three generations, the knights of medieval Europe were also displaying the first rudimentary forms of coat armor. Rendered on shields, surcoats, horse trappings, and other paraphernalia, these armorial insignia during the medieval period served the need of identifications in battle and in tournament.

Today, coat armor is most closely associated in the popular mind with the medieval tournament, or joust. Much like the Western gunfighter, young knights in brilliant arrays of color and insignia took part in the formalized combat of the joust in hopes of being noticed and retained by the wealthy nobles. Their success - and even their livelihood - depended in large part on their being recognized by the aristocracy. Heraldry, or the science of arranging and describing coat armor, grew out of this need for recognition.

With the passage of time and the withering of feudalism, the use of coat armor passed into the general populace. With the refinements of the sixteenth century and the subsequent standardization of terminology and principles, heraldry acquired importance as both a legal entity and a genealogical research tool. Today in most of Europe, it has the status accorded a trademark and is highly prized by those families who are entitled to its use.

Heraldry, or the study of armorial bearings, is an adjunct to the study of family history. Coat armor, it is important to note, was completely unknown in Europe before the twelfth century, and did not appear in England until about 1250. Its sudden rise has been ascribed to several varied events, including the First Crusade (1097), the advent of body armor, and the growing use of seals on personal documents.

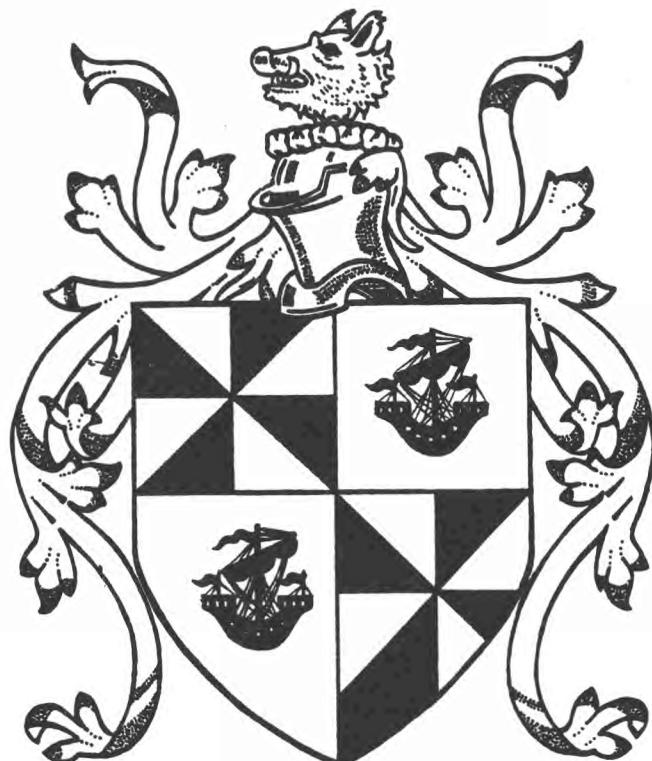

In any case, the early development of the use of heraldic devices followed closely upon the need for better identification, and the trend became widespread. First embellished on shields and other pieces of armor, the imaginative, elaborate heraldic designs soon were transferred to surcoats, horse trappings, and even private possessions. These early insignia, including bends (diagonal stripes), fesses (horizontal stripes), chevrons, and crosses, were chosen because they were conspicuous, even in the chaos of bloody battle. For the same reason bright colors were used.

Charges, or representations of animals and natural objects, did not become popular until the second half of the twelfth century, when, as stated above, the use of surnames was revived.

With the advent of gunpowder in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, and the concomitant decline of armor as an essential in warfare, the need for armorial bearings also waned. By then, though, coats of arms were cherished for their decorative effect, and family crests were handed down from proud sire to aspiring son. The ancient art was debased by the frenzied efforts of many people to coin their own armorial bearings and adorn them with embellishments and devices of doubtful historical significance.

Central authorities were established to inquire into the validity of the new creations. Their work was generally ineffectual in maintaining the simplicity and purity of the earlier designs, but their thorough records have subsequently proved very useful to the genealogical researcher. These records, showing hereditary usage of certain symbols and devices, represent in many cases the only means for unraveling the complex familial relationships of medieval Europe.

In the United States, where the democratic tradition has mitigated interest in holding and preserving official armorial bearings, there is nonetheless a great informal interest in the science of heraldry. The question of rightful ownership of coat armor does not pertain in this country, for the very nature of the settlement and development of America makes it unlikely that any more than a few families have legitimate claim to specific insignia. Heraldry is instead highly regarded for its aesthetic and historical qualities - for the symbols, devices, and colors generally associated with any particular surname tell a story of our ancestors. Burke's General Armory lists seventy-six coats of arms for the Campbell family. Most of these are similar to the two described below.

Campbell

ARMS: Quarterly, first and fourth, gyrenny of eight, or and sable; second and third, argent, a lymphad, sail furled, flags flying, all sable. CREST: a boar's head couped or. MOTTOES: Ne obliviscaris. CLAN CAMPBELL AND OTHERS

"Mr. Pinkerton, misled by a very fanciful etymology, has assigned to the Campbells a Norman origin, and in this notion he has been followed by all those persons who find it more easy to adopt an authority than to investigate a fact, or discuss an opinion. Having assumed that the name Campbell is merely an abbreviated form of Campo-bello, he concluded, first, that the latter was a Norman appellation; and, secondly, that the Campbells were not Celts but Goths, who had originally sprung from a Norman family, known by the designation of Campo-bello. But in answer to this etymological conceit, it may be sufficient to observe, that, as far as an inference can be deduced from a name, that of Campbell, if it had originally been Campo-bello, would have indicated an Italian rather than a Norman origin; and, besides, that no trace has ever been discovered of the existence of a Norman family distinguished by the name of Campo-bello. Doomsday book and other similar records make no mention of any such family. The farther back we trace the denomination of this clan, the more unlikely does it become to the Italianized name of Campo-bello; and the oldest mode of writing it is in the Ragman Roll, where it appears as Cambel or Kambell, a word clearly of Celtic derivation.

"The Campbells first made their appearance in the reign of Alexander III, when they were divided into two great families, which were afterward distinguished by the patronymics of MacArthur and MacCaillanmore. In 1266, Gillespie Cambel, head of the MacCaillanmore branch, witnessed the charter of erection of the burgh of Newburgh by Alexander III; and there is some reason to believe that he was heritable sheriff of Argyle, which had, in 1221, been erected into a sheriffdom by Alexander II. But it was not until the reign of Robert Bruce that the Campbells obtained a firm footing in Argyle, and laid the foundation of their future greatness and power. To the gratitude of that great sovereign, whom he had faithfully served, Sir Niell Campbell of Lochawe was indebted for many grants that were made to him out of the lands forfeited by the house of Lorn, the Comyns, and other supporters of the party of John Baliol. The marriage of this baron with the sister of King Robert attached the Campbells still more closely to the dynasty of Bruce; and, during the minority of David II they adhered to his interests with unwavering fidelity. Early in the fifteenth century, Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochawe, afterward the first Lord Campbell, was considered as one of the most wealthy barons in Scotland. Colin Campbell, grandson of Sir Duncan, and the first Earl of Argyll, acquired by marriage the extensive lordship of Lorn, and, for a long period, held the office of chancellor of Scotland. In 1475, this nobleman was appointed to prosecute a decree of forfeiture against John, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, and, in 1481, he received a considerable grant of lands in Knapdale, amongst with the Keepership of the castle of Sweyn, which was formerly held by the Lord of the Isles. Colin, the first Earl, died in the year 1491, and was succeeded by his son Archibald, the second earl, of whom, however, little or nothing is known.

"The Campbells were ambitious and aspiring, continued to make rapid advances in power and influence during the 17th and 18th centuries. The Marquis of Argyll, commonly called Gillespe Grumach, did more to aggrandize his family than almost any of his predecessors. He succeeded in establishing claims to a great part of the estate of Dowart, and he obliged all the other branches of the MacLeans, as well as the clan Chameron, the Clan Ranald of Garmoran, the Clan Neill of Gigha, and many other tribes, to become his vassals, notwithstanding that they had previously held their lands of the Crown. His son, the ninth Earl of Argyll, consolidated the power which he had thus acquired; and, as the forfeitures of this earl and his father were rescinded at the Revolution, the family of Argyll found itself possessed of greater influence than any other in Scotland; and, as formerly, this influence was supported by the willing service and cooperation of a great many powerful families of the same name.

"The MacArthur branch appears to have been originally at the head of the Clan Campbell, and to have held this position until the reign of James I, when it was displaced by the MacCaillanmore branch, which has ever since maintained an undisputed supremacy. The force of the clan, at different times, has varied considerably. In 1427, it was only 1,000; but in 1715, it had increased to four thousand, and in 1745, it amounted to five thousand. At Culloden, the Campbells were opposed by their countrymen, and did very serious injury to the Highland Army by breaking down a wall, and opening a flanking fire at the critical moment of the battle. It is but just to add, that this powerful clan has generally contrived to be on the strongest side."

COLONISTS FROM SCOTLAND: EMIGRATION TO NORTH AMERICA 1707-1783

By: Ian Charles Cargill Graham, 1956

THE CAMPBELLS FROM THE ISLE OF SKYE

As a basis for compiling the genealogy of Daniel Campbell, his wife, Effie McLean and their descendants, it is necessary to have some background knowledge of the situations under which they emigrated from the Isle of Skye to America. The Scottish people are divided into two classes: Highlanders and Lows. The classification is based on the geographical locations of the people and their respective homes and livelihoods. The geographical boundary between Highlands and Lowlands has generally been held to lie along the line where the lowlands meet the highlands, which is in most places well defined by the contour of the land itself. It runs across the north side of the Clyde Valley, then North and east through Perthshire and Angus and around the east side of Scotland close to the coast where it turns to the northwest to the end of the northern shore near Pentland Pirth, leaving Cathness as a remote post of the Lowlands. The Western Isles, or Hebrides, have always belonged to the Highlands in every respect, while the Northern Isles possessed some of the characteristics of both Highlands and Lowlands.

The military and feudal life of the clans prevailed in the entire Highland area, and the clansmen continued to make raids into the neighboring Lowlands to carry off cattle. A man's first loyalty was to his chief who could indulge in private warfare and administer justice on the lands of his clan. The law of Scotland possessed little force beyond the Highland Line. The Reformation had never penetrated many of the Highland glens and Western Isles. The people of each area were ignorant of the other, holding them in contempt in proportion to their ignorance.

The disruption and dissolution of the old Highland way of life took place in the generation after the defeat of the Stuart cause at Culloden in 1746. In this period the British government made a determined effort to assimilate the Highlands to the rising commercial and industrial civilization of the Lowlands. School teachers, Presbyterian missionaries and Lowland craftsmen were sent to the remotest glens of the north to save, train and educate the ignorant masses of the Highlands. The Jacobite Rebellion of 1745 served to point up the differences between the Highlanders and Lowlanders. The Highlanders were unwilling to be taught by Lowlanders for they considered them a mean and degenerate race.

The majority of the Highlanders were farmers of sorts, cultivating what was called "run-rig" (Lands divided into strips) plots and grazed their cattle in the large common pasture and soon found that they could not make an adequate income on a small enclosed plot where only limited grazing was possible. This situation led to more poverty and overpopulation resulting from crop failure from early frost, loss of cattle in the spring and an increase of rents for their cattle because of the greater poundage production from sheep that were able to graze shorter grass than cattle in a ratio of about 3 to 1. This over population led to auctions for higher rents which made life more precarious for the Highland farmer. As early as 1750 poverty caused such a "depression of spirit" among the inhabitants of the Isle of Skye that groups of them were sailing for America. Apparently this was the case with Daniel and Effie McLean Campbell when they came to America in 1752.

It is clear that the great governing cause of emigration from the Highlands in the middle fifty years of the eighteenth century was poverty - the kind of poverty that arises from a growing population pressing upon limited agricultural and commercial resources. The poverty of the masses, especially in the Highlands, can hardly be overstressed. Following the Jacobite Rebellion, there arose two other reasons for emigration involving compulsion - transportation for treason or crimes and the drafting of troops to the colonies. In Scotland, during most of the 17th and 18th centuries, treason and crime were frequently punished by exile to the English colonies. Many judges and other people in authority believed that turning capital punishment into exile was an act of clemency and not cruelty. It is an exaggeration to describe the Jacobite exiles as a wave of emigration. The bulk of the Jacobite settlers were Highlanders. They did no more than to lay a narrow foundation for the migrations of the future. From the beginning, the Highland emigrants' letters home were a very powerful influence in attracting others to America. Many emigrants were eager to serve in the military since the veteran felt confident of a material future in the colonies better than anything he could ever find in the overpopulated glens of the Highlands. Overpopulation had driven him into the army in the first place. In the emigration, the people of Argyll, Ross, Sutherland, and the Isle of Skye preferred settling in the Carolinas. Thus the clannish instinct helped to increase the emigration once the initial Highland settlements had been made. The more Highlanders in America, the more those left at home desired to join them. Instead of a sorrowful farewell when family members and friends sailed from the Isle of Skye, those left behind seemed to think that they would soon follow. Many people were unable to pay for their transportation and to reimburse for their travel, many people indentured themselves as servants for a period of corresponding time to repay the expenses that they had been advanced for their oceanic passage.

Nothing is known, at this time, where the Campbells sailed from, or landed. However, it has been rumored that he was one of five brothers who emigrated to America at the same time. Nothing is known of the places where they lived prior to their settling in the northwestern portion of what was known as Walton County, Florida, where they died and were buried in what was known at one time as "Cedar Cove" Cemetery, later as the Clary Cemetery and currently as Magnolia Cemetery. Their grave sites are lost but their descendants are scattered over much of Northwest Florida and South Alabama.

This work does not purport to be perfect but is rather an effort to record a few facts for posterity and serve as a source material sometime in the future for whomever might be interested. Efforts have been made to obtain resumes of the different families without adequate and sufficient success. Perhaps someone in the future might undertake a more objective reconstruction and revision of these efforts.

The following news story is copied from the Pensacola Gazette of December 10, 1842.

"There now resides in Walton County about 75 miles from this (Pensacola) place a man and his wife whose united age is 229 years. The old gentleman's name is Daniel Campbell. He was united to his present wife 94 years ago in the Isle of Skye, Scotland. He emigrated to this country several years before the Revolution and was about 50 years old when the War began. There were no neutrals then and as Mr. Campbell left his native country in consequence of the political trouble of 1745, he was prepared to take part with the colonists against the House of Hanover. He served through nearly all the entire Revolutionary War. But although very poor, he was not able to avail himself of the Bounty or rather of the just remuneration which the pension laws have provided for the survivors of that glorious epoch because before the passage of the Act of 1832, he was by extreme old age and mental infirmity rendered incapable of making the declaration required by the law. He is now 117 years of age, his wife is 112 years old."

This author found records indicating that one Daniel Campbell did file an application for Revolutionary War Pension which was denied because of too short a period of service.

Daniel Campbell was born on the Isle of Skye, Scotland, in the year 1725 and in the year 1749 he married Miss Effie McLean. They moved to America in the year 1752 together with his family. He died on his birthday, December 12, 1843. His wife died the day before he passed away and both were buried at the same hour in the Sam Clary Cemetery near Magnolia settlement in Walton County, Florida. They lived together a total of 94 years. She bore him 6 children. One son, Peter, married Christian McCaskill, daughter of Allen McCaskill and to them were born 7 children, Margaret, (Katie) Catherine, Alexander, Janie, Daniel, Sallie and Allen.

AS TOLD BY WILL BARNHILL, BAKER, FLORIDA
TO THIS AUTHOR

Before the Civil War and because of an epidemic of Yellow Fever in Milton, the Peaden Family moved to (what was then Walton County) a place a few miles north of the present town of Milligan. They became extensive land owners and were quite prosperous.

Descendants of this family still live about 12 miles north of Milligan and about 3 miles south of Oak Grove.

Prior to and following the Civil War, several Stage Coach Inns were located in the vicinity of Yellow River. One of these Inns was located at what is now known as the Griffith Ferry, a few miles north of Milligan and a little northwest of Crestview. In 1862, Sweet Powell, a brother-in-law of James Monroe Barnhill, bought the Stage Coach Inn and operated it together with a post office, known as Austinville on the Old Original Spanish Trail on the east side of the river at Griffith Ferry.

During the War, James Monroe Barnhill was unable to serve because of serious rupture. One day some Raiders came by and found him out in the woods hunting his hogs. They forced him to accompany them to the Griffith Ferry to help them get across. After making several trips back and forth across the river, the Raiders forced Barnhill to load all of Griffith's good heart fence rails on the ferry flat, set fire to it, and then set it adrift down the river scattering fire as it drifted with the current.

Also during the War, Alex Jones, a deserter, lived a few miles north of the ferry. His loyal wife washed his clothes and hung them out to dry every week thereby causing their home to be closely watched in hope of catching the deserter. This was an excellent ruse to deploy the attention of police at home while the deserter lived safely in a community several miles away. During the time he made a good corn crop in an opening in the swamp and harvested it. After shelling the corn and placing it in a hollow log, he sealed the cracks and crevices with pitch to protect it from mice and weevils.

Franklin King, one of the pioneer settlers of Oak Grove Community, had the unique experience of living in three different counties in the State of Florida while living in the same house. Walton, Santa Rosa, and Okaloosa.

Prior to the Civil War, Norman Campbell operated a Stage Coach Inn $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north of old Pineway on the east side of the present L & N RR purchased from Yellow River RR. Two large live oak trees still stand.

Many ingenious devices were used to move the virgin timber to saw mills and market during the time that the trees were cut. One method worth noting was a method frequently referred to as "Pole or Tram roads." Timbers of regular sizes were cut and laid end to end in a double line equa-distant apart so as to fit the flanges on the wheels of the tram. A tram is a skeleton flat car used for transporting logs, the wheels of which are adjustable according to the length of the logs. The poles were used until they became so frayed that they were unfit for further use. These pole roads were laid out to follow the contour of the land so as to have as little difficulty as possible in moving the loads.

The most desirable place to unload the trams on the river bank was to locate a place where the river came out to the foot of a hill forming a high bluff over which to roll the logs into the river where they were joined together in rafts and floated down the river to the mill and manufactured into lumber. The tram road made sort of a sweep down by the river bank. The empty trams were pulled back out into the woods by oxen, reloaded and returned to the river bank for unloading.

The log haulers had special places along the small streams where they drank water.

The following petitions are taken from the Territorial Papers of Florida

January 24, 1832 - Petition of Walton County Citizens for the reappointment of Honorable Henry M. Breckinridge as Judge of Superior Court of the Western District of Florida. The following subscribers from section 5 of the Petition appear to have been residents of the Laurel Hill or Almarante area of Walton County:

Campbell, Daniel D., John, Donald	Gaskins, Wright
Senterfitt, Stephen	McCaskill, Alexander
Baggett, Thomas, Edmund	Stokes, Absalom
Hart, Reuben, Sr., Reuben Jr., John, Daniel	Barrow, Reuben N., John
Ward, William

In 1834, a petition to 23rd Congress, first session a Memorial from the citizens of Escambia County, Territory of Florida, for an increase in salary of the Judge of Western District of the Territory from Walton County. Signers included Daniel, Daniel D., Alexander and John Campbell.

January 21, 1839. A petition to Congress by the citizens of West Florida (covering an area with about 40 families) for removal from Yellow River of piles of driftwood, buried logs and rafts at an estimated cost of approximately $6,000.00. This clearing would make some 50 miles of Yellow River navigable. Petition for an appropriation to clear the river included the following signers.

John Campbell	William Ward	Daniel Hart
James D. Clary	John Barrow	Jesse Senterfitt
Nicholas Baggett	Edmund Baggett	John Stokes
Lewis Baggett	Stephen Senterfitt	Absalom Stokes
Robert Steele	Peter Campbell	Alexander Baggett
Richmond Barrow	Wright Gaskins	Henry Baggett
Alexander Campbell	William Gaskins	Alexander Fountain
Daniel A. Wilkinson	John Gaskins	Daniel McDuffie
Reuben Hart	Wright A. Stokes

June 4, 1842 -- A second petition to Honorable David Levy, Delegate to Congress, by the citizens of Walton County for $15,000.00 appropriation to clear obstruction of logs and rafts from Yellow River for navigation and development of the area "and we your humble petitioners will ever pray that this our second petition may be granted."
Almarante, Walton County, Florida, June 4, 1842.

A LITTLE HISTORY IN CONNECTION WITH LAUREL HILL, FLORIDA
Some Sections Contributed by Ferrin C. Campbell

According to legend, the first settlement where the town of Laurel Hill, Florida, is located was called "Old California," and was marked by a group of large red oak trees standing on ground northeast of the R. J. Hart home.

Laurel Hill was first established as a logging camp, sometime in the early eighteen-nineties; perhaps about 1891 or 1892. The W. H. Tyner, Senior, family settled about three miles south of the present town in 1888 after selling their entire possessions near Green Bay, Alabama, and migrating to Henrietta, Texas, and returning. This site was known as Pineway and was established as a post office June 3, 1890, closed November 28, 1896 prior to being moved to Laurel Hill. W. H. Tyner, Sr. was the first postmaster and kept a small store in connection with the office. The Yellow River R.R. had not been extended even to Pineway in 1888. The old Yellow River R.R. (Crestview to Floraia) was begun at Crestview in 1885, and built by the W. B. Wright Land and Lumber Co., of Pensacola, Florida, as a logging road over which to haul long leaf yellow pine timber from this area to the Wright mill at Pensacola over the logging road to Crestview, L & N RR to Bayou Siding, near Milton, Florida, and thence by water to the saw mill. The railroad built by extensions necessary to reach farther into the pine timber forests, first terminated at Shacktown (located just south of the present site of Auburn community), Caledonia (which was about 200 yards north of the present Dorsey Service station), to Campton, (where extensive turpentine operations were carried on from about 1905 to 1912), to Pineway (where W. H. Tyner, Sr. settled with his family upon their return from Texas. A daughter, Adelia, lived until her death in the same house which was moved about 60 feet west to provide right of way for Hwy #85 in 1926), to Williamson's (another turpentine stilling operation center), to Laurel Hill, to Cowan's Mill, to Svea, to Hood's Track, to Gipsonville; and, finally, in 1898, into Floraia, Alabama.

Some old citizens say that the railroad reached Laurel Hill in the year 1892. In April, 1899, an "accommodation" train was in operation, which was made up of both freight cars and a combination baggage-mail-express-passenger coach drawn by a small wood burning locomotive - The Old No. 2. The train departed Crestview about 9 o'clock a.m. and arrived at Laurel Hill about 12 o'clock noon. Three hours making about 17 miles. Stops were made to discharge and load freight, mail, express, and passengers at Richbourg's Crossing, Shacktown, Green's Crossing, Campton, Tyner's and Williamson's Stills. Joe Edge was conductor; Henry Francis, engineer. J. H. (Bud) Givens was Superintendent and M. A. Miot, Master Mechanic. Captain Eric Von Axelson, later postmaster at Munson, Florida, was postmaster and Editor of the Laurel Hill Gazette, a weekly newspaper. W. W. Commander was his assistant.

Business establishments: General stores of A. D. & M. M. Morrison, managed by A. E. Campbell, R. J. Hart, J. L. Richburg, D. T. Finlayson, an immigrant from Scotland, and John F. Merrill. Hotel Walton was operated by George W. Crawford. Mrs. R. J. Hart, recently passed away, also served meals to the traveling public and lodged some. Doctor R. L. Miller owned the drug store and administered to the sick. Joe Barlow nightwatched and operated a barber shop. In later years he was the community grave digger. He, perhaps, dug more graves in Almarante

Cemetery than anyone else and personally knew the persons interred in same and could locate anyone in whom a stranger might be interested. The "El Providor" was the only cafe in town, operated by Nick Morrisey.

Laurel Hill received its name from a large laurel tree which stood near an open well dug at a point somewhere between where the depot stood and the R. R. Fountain home. The last vestiges of the depot were removed by E. W. Campbell about 1950 after sale to him.

This spot was probably the original log camp site.

Angus Ernest Campbell, commonly known in the Laurel Hill area as Ernest Campbell, came to Laurel Hill on May 1, 1898 with his family, his wife, Margaret McDavid Campbell, from McDavid, Florida, generally known as Maggie Campbell, and three children, Robert Palmer Campbell, Mabel Eleanor Campbell and Ernest Willie Campbell. After they came to Laurel Hill, there were four more children, Louise S. Campbell, Annie Maude Campbell, Murdock Newton Campbell, and Clyde Fisher Campbell, born of this marriage. Ernest Campbell came to Laurel Hill as manager of the commissary and the office of the Yellow River Railroad Company which had its headquarters at Laurel Hill at that time.

Yellow River Railroad was owned by brothers, A. D. Morrison and Macon Morrison. The commissary of the railroad at that time was located approximately where the last depot on the north side of the railroad was located. A few years after Ernest Campbell came to Laurel Hill, the Morrison brothers sold Yellow River Railroad to L&N Railroad and at that time Ernest Campbell and A. D. Morrison went into business together at the old Campbell Company location, under the name Campbell Company (the wooden building where Campbell Company was located at the time of the death of Ernest Campbell in 1939).

Later, Alcus Daniel Campbell commonly known as Dan Campbell, a brother of Ernest Campbell, moved to Laurel Hill and he purchased the interest of A. D. Morrison in Campbell Company and thereafter Ernest Campbell and Dan Campbell operated Campbell Company as a partnership. Dan Campbell later acquired additional interest so that during the latter years, Ernest Campbell and Dan Campbell each owned one-half interest in the business.

After Ernest Campbell and Dan Campbell operated the business for a few years, in the old wooden building, they opened up a dry goods store in the adjoining brick building and operated in two separate buildings for a few years and later they moved the dry goods business which was operated by Dan Campbell to the old Peoples Bank Building, where Dan Campbell continued to operate this business until he died.

Clyde Fisher Campbell and Annie Maude Campbell operated the grocery and hardware portion of Campbell Company, in the old wooden building, after Ernest Campbell's death in 1939 through World War II and on up until this part of the business was closed. Dan Campbell, who married Christine McDonald, a teacher, operated the dry goods portion of the business up until his death.

Almost every family in that area depended on employment, either directly or indirectly with the Yellow River RR and its attendant logging operations for a livelihood. And the railroad operated on profits derived from the great virgin long leaf yellow pine forests in that country - saw mills and turpentine stills. A great forest was dissipated for meager returns to the whole people. A great natural resource - an inheritance - spent unwisely in a short period.

Before the L & N RR Co. purchased the Yellow River RR in 1902, Mr. Reese had succeeded in building up business to such an extent that the Yellow River RR owned heavier rails and new equipment necessary to carry on with a small common carrier railroad with profit to himself and his brother, J. Simpson Reese, and the Wright heirs, actual owners of the original log road.

During these years - 1892 to 1902 - Laurel Hill was an active and growing small railroad center community. But after the L & N took over in 1902, it began the transition into a small agricultural trading center.

A branch line was built from Falco Junction located approximately 1½ miles south of Laurel Hill, to Wing, Alabama, in the early 1900's over which the Florida and Alabama Lumber Co. moved logs and timber to tidewater at Pensacola, Florida. This railroad was abandoned soon after the L & N bought the Yellow River RR.

The public school boasted an enrollment of 70 with two teachers. There were no grades; you were either in the "first, second, third, fourth, fifth up to the sixth reader." The school building was located just west of where the W. B. Fountain home now stands - a two-room "shack." In the early 1900's a four-room wood structure was built about ½ mile south of town; about 1918-20 a brick, two-story structure consisting of five rooms downstairs with Principal's office, three rooms upstairs with an auditorium. In 1932 this building was destroyed by fire. In 1933-34 during the "Depression," Federal funds were made available and through the efforts of Dr. S. E. Stephens, T. R. James, Mack Tyner, and T. H. Edney, these funds were allocated to build a new school house for Laurel Hill. The part of the present building containing steel windows was erected with funds from the insurance and the remainder with the exception of the Cafetorium was built with Federal WPA funds. The building was renovated in 1954 when the Cafetorium was added, and a gymnasium made of the former auditorium. This building burned as a result of lightning in July, 1971.

Good roads and automobiles were as far away as the stars in those days. The roads were maintained by every able-bodied man providing his own tools and a certain number of days' labor to keep public roads in passable condition. Each person rendered his service in his own community under the direction of a Road Supervisor. Bicycles were the mode of travel for the men of the day if they had no horse.

The only telephone connection with the outside world was at the Yellow River RR Co. depot, a line used to dispatch trains. Telegraph line was installed in 1902. The first telephone conversation between Laurel Hill, Florida and Florala, Alabama, was carried on between Mallie Martin and James E. Hughes of Florala, Alabama, in the fall of 1899. The Laurel Hill community is now served by the first Rural Telephone allocation made in the United States under the auspices of the Florala Telephone Company.

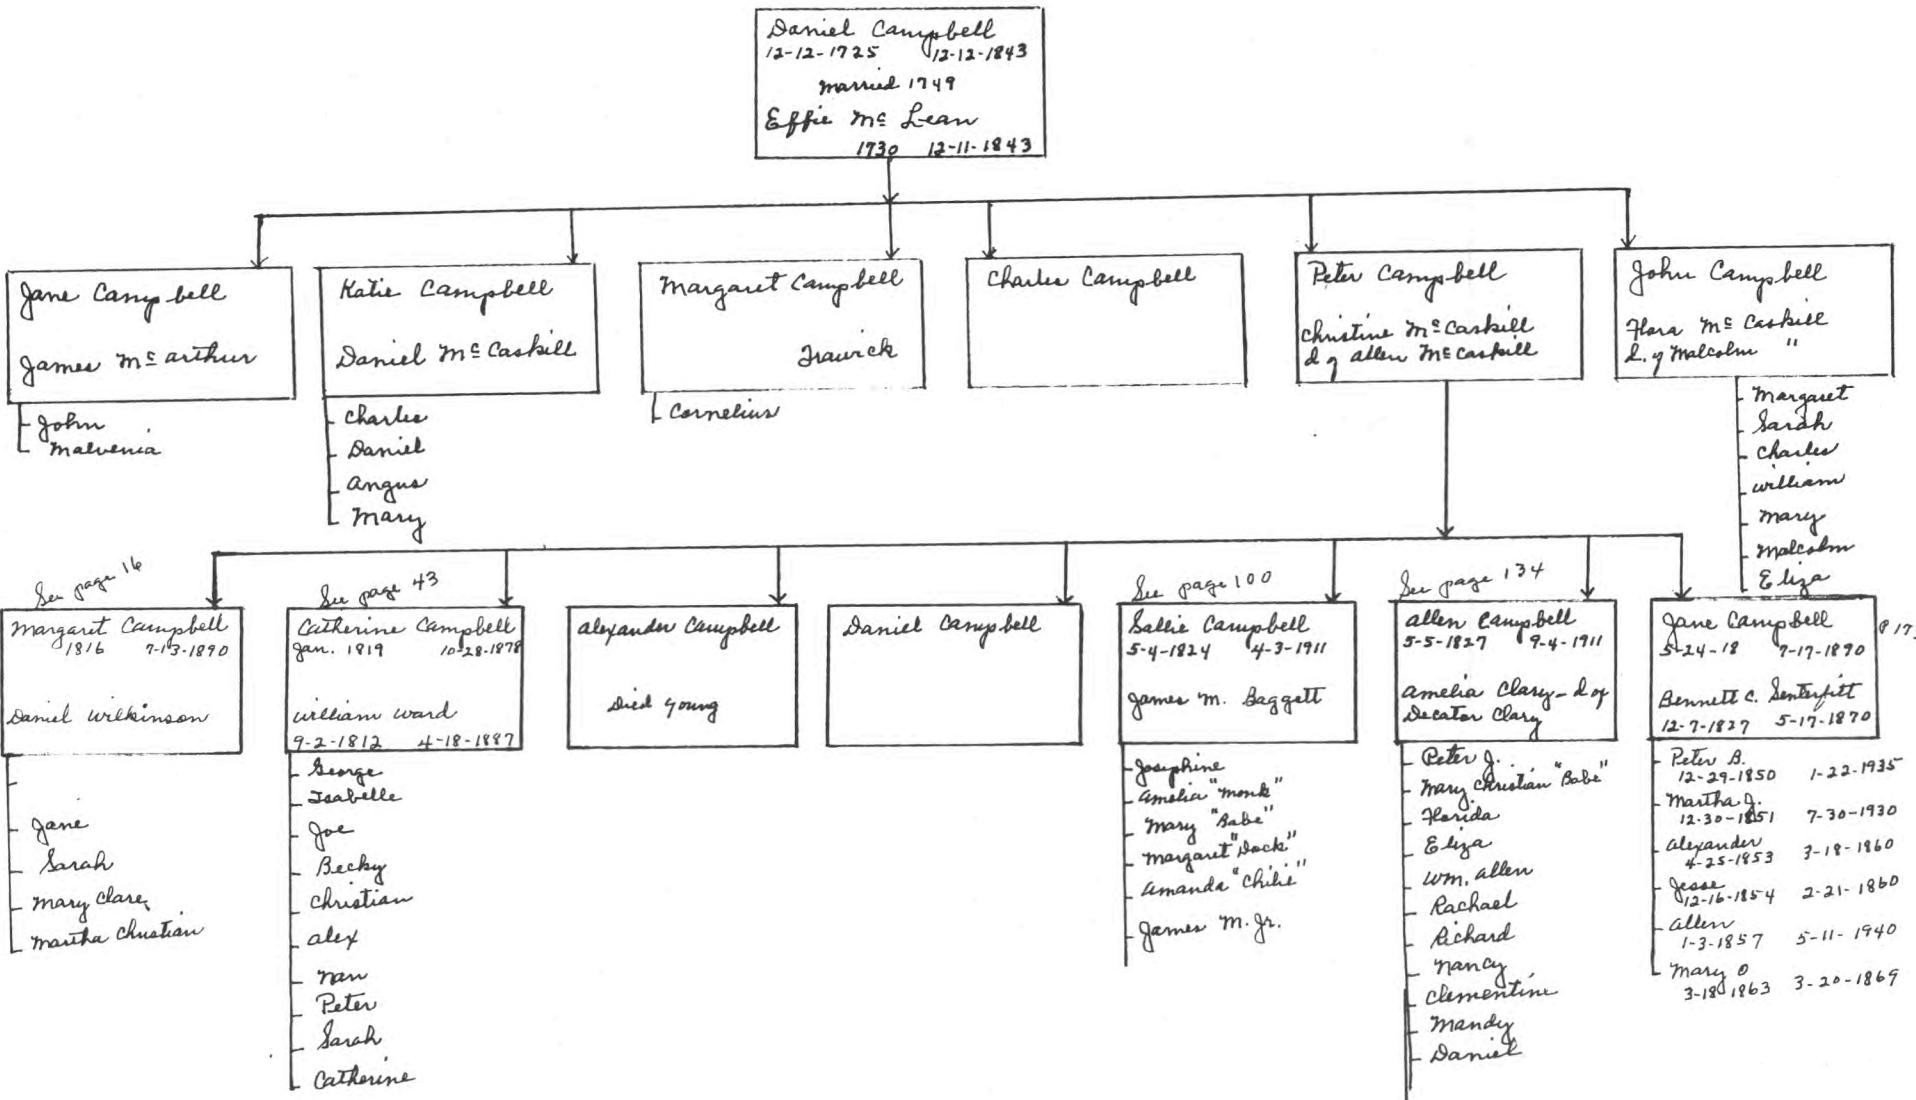

RAUL MOORE SPRING

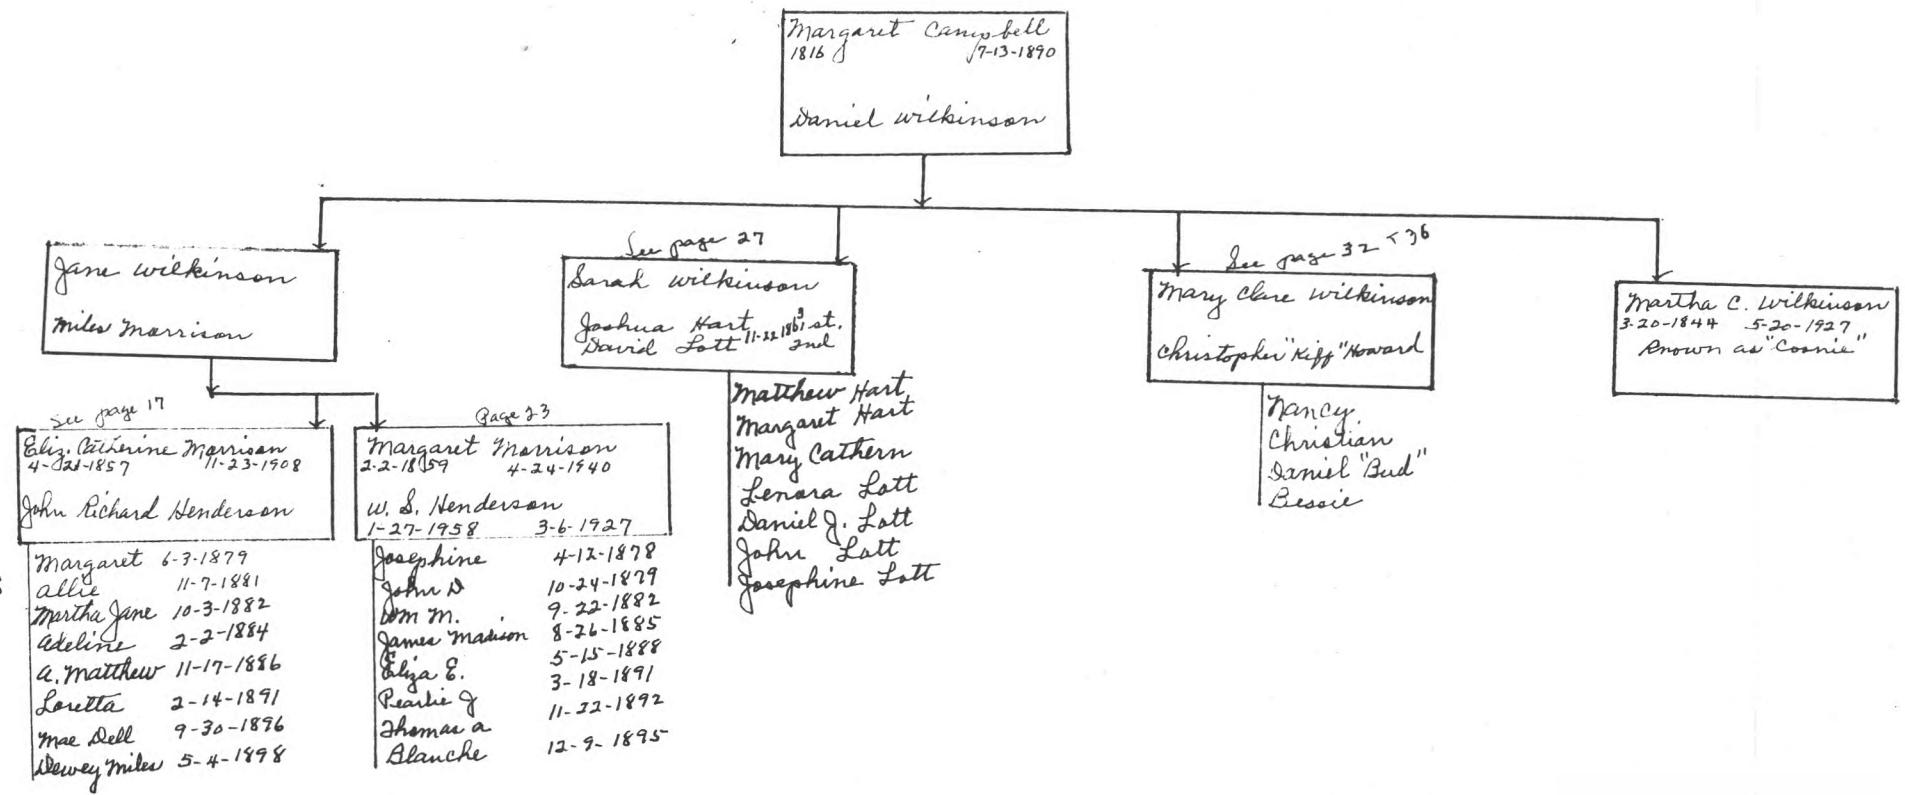

Prior to the Civil War, "Precinct" was one of the first, if not the first, school house in North Okaloosa County. It was located on an old stage coach road about two miles southwest of Laurel Hill and about 1½ mile from present Almarante Cemetery. It was customary to locate the school near a good spring of water. This school being no exception, they had the use of a beautiful, blue, free-flowing spring known as Mineral Spring, later as Raul Moore Spring, which never went dry. Among the Pre-Civil War pupils attending this school were: Allen Campbell, Honest John Campbell, Doctor Richburg, Sallie Campbell, Jane, Coonie, Mary and Sarah Wilkerson, John Clary.

During the English occupation of Florida, 1763-1783, Bernard Romans saw the swamps along Yellow River, then variously known as the Chester River (in honor of Governor Peter Chester), the Yellow Water, or, by its Indian name, weelanee, as potentially valuable rice lands; but the English withdrew from Florida before any effort could be made to develop them. Romans foresaw that the contour of the country would make road building difficult, and, although the Spanish trail from Pensacola to St. Augustine traversed it, crossing the Yellow River a few miles above its junction with its main tributary, Shoal River, the old trail had fallen into such disrepair by 1824, that when Congress authorized the building of a military road from Pensacola to St. Augustine, it was abandoned in favor of a less circuitous and easier route following the coast line between Pensacola and Choctawhatchee Bays. As the better lands of this region lay to the north, this section of the military road was never traveled much.

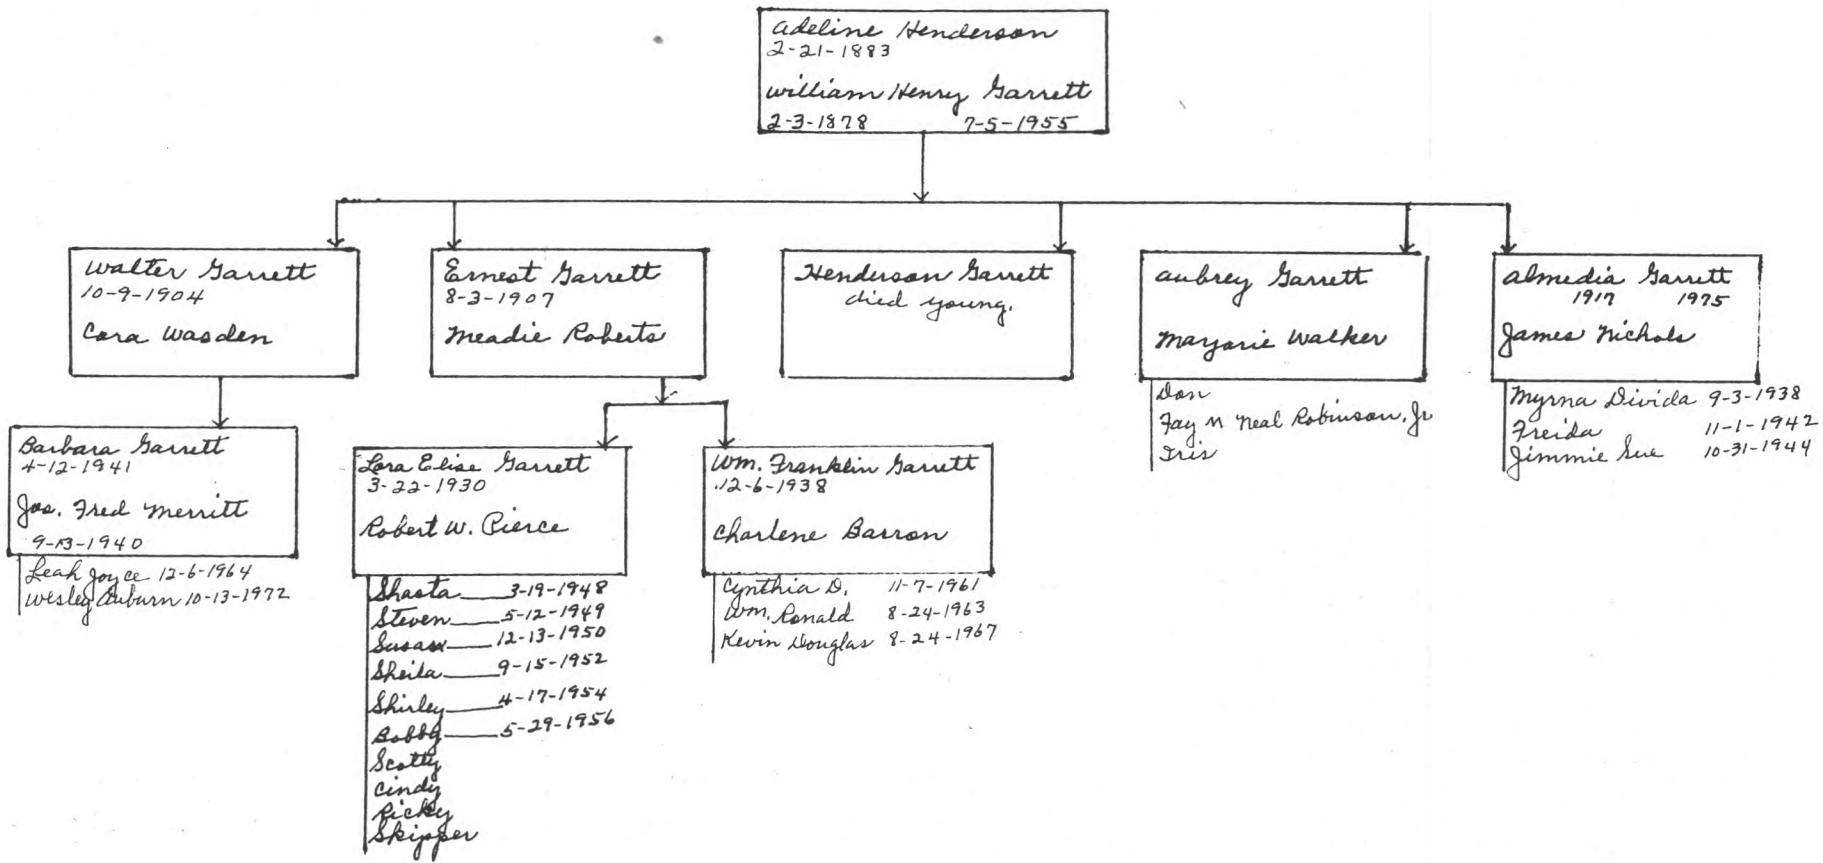

More important to the development of the area than the building of the military road was the Government Survey of Lands, now in Okaloosa County, which was made between 1825 and 1829 by Benjamin and Hosea Clements, J. W. Exum, and J. P. Love. There was a Scottish settlement on Yellow River as early as 1824 and by 1828 there were post offices at Almarante and Yellow Water which reported an annual business of $5.95 and $3.74 respectively. The post office at Almarante was established as Yellow Water on January 31, 1827 with Jeremiah Savelle appointed postmaster. The name of the office was changed to Almarante on May 5, 1828 and was closed in 1836; reopened again in 1840 and later closed 1867. The site was located somewhere in the vicinity of the present Almarante Cemetery where many Campbell descendants are buried. Clearing of the Yellow River of the log rafts which obstructed it gave the settlement water communication with Pensacola. By 1837 a flourishing agricultural community, which milled its own corn and sold its cotton and surplus food stuffs (mainly corn, potatoes, rice and peas) in Pensacola, existed on both sides of the river.

JOSEPHINE BAGGETT

Josephine Baggett, b January 23, 1851, married Honest John Campbell, b October 23, 1847. He was rather a quiet, small man in stature with large or prominent ears and wore a beard stained with tobacco juice. He was industrious and a great experimenter with his talents, growing peaches, concord grapes, and apples which were a complete failure, changing breeds of his hogs, and a good gardener. Because of his sincerity and extreme honesty, all who knew him gave him the name of "Honest John." He lived at the time when the great, native yellow pine forest was being harvested and exported, and for a time, kept boarders during the work week. He had an expression that he used quite frequently and would preface his remarks and comments with "I des say." On occasions he worked with the logging crew performing the duty or chore of tailing the log cart drawn by one to three yoke of oxen. One day in the performance of his job, the log knocked him down into the log cart rut. He immediately gathered himself together, brushed off as much dirt as he could and said, "I des say, what's a fella doing tailing a log cart with $500.00 in his pocket?"

One year he grew an excellent crop of the famous Elberta peaches. Since turpentining the yellow pine timber was a very profitable business, Dave Williamson operated a large turpentine still near the Falco Junction and had a large crew of both blacks and whites. One day "Honest" John was at the still and walking around in the coopershop when he saw lots of Elberta peach peels and seed on the ground. When he asked the source of the peaches, the Negro in charge of the coopershop replied, "From Mr. Seigler, he has plenty of them." "Honest" John, knowing that these peaches had been stolen from his orchard and by whom, returned home and proceeded to arm himself with "windy Jim" and awaited Mr. Seigler's raid on his orchard. As soon as "Honest" John watched Seigler gather his bag of peaches and start over the rail fence, he fired on him and believed that he had killed the man. Early the following morning, "Honest" John got his spade and his son, Bob, to accompany him to the shooting site expecting to find the culprit dead and to bury him in place. Alas, all they found was the peaches and no sign of the man. He never lost any more peaches. "Honest" John was a surveyor of sorts and was often called upon to run land lines for his neighbors.

"Honest" John and Josephine believed in taking full advantage of any and all available schooling within walking distance of their home. The children attended public school about five miles southeast of home in an open log house which they called "Kelley University" because the nearest neighbors were named Kelley. Later the log house was abandoned because there was no way to heat it during winter. Then a board and batten house was built by the school patrons and heated with a heater. The children would go out into the woods and pick up off the ground such wood, sticks, and pine knots as could be burned in the heater. With the addition of the heater, the children would attend school during the summer at Almarante Church and return to the Kelley School during the winter term. With this alternate schooling, the children were able to attain the equivalent of an eighth-grade education which was a great educational advantage over the neighboring children, many of whom were unwilling to walk such distances to attend school.

1. Mandah Catherine Campbell, better known as Kate, never married but during her adult life, she followed the logging crews for the saw mills and operated a boarding house. She had a pleasing personality but was prone to gossip thereby enjoying the creation of dissention and strife between people in the neighborhood. She had one son, Joseph E. Campbell.

2. Teloolah "Lula" Campbell, b April 19, 1876, married Benjamin Horace Hart I, November 20, 1917, and lived on a farm and ranch in a large three bedroom, unpainted, heart lumber, frame house with a hall separating the main portion of the house and with a large kitchen and dining room separate from the main house and joined by a walk-way. They owned approximately 10,000 acres of land on which they grazed sheep, cattle, and hogs. They kept horses to ride the range and herd the cattle for marking and branding and the sheep for shearing in the late spring or early summer. Benjamin Horace had three children by an earlier marriage: Leila who married Sam Cox and lived at Milton, Florida; Maude who married Miles A Warren and lived at Vero Beach, Florida; Samson who married Agnes Frater and lived on a farm near Shoal River and in Crestview, Florida. Lula's only child was Benjamin Horace Jr., married Faye Joyce Cooper and is now living near Tampa, Florida.
3. Mary Ann "Babo" Campbell, b November 15, 1877, married Capers Tyner with the Reverend L. P. Gordon officiating at the bride's home located about three miles south of Laurel Hill, Florida. They set up housekeeping on the spot where her grandfather, Norman A. Campbell, operated a Stage Coach Inn during the latter 1850's and early 1860's. They had a one-mule farm with a few chickens, hogs and cows. She was a jolly and friendly person and quite slow-motioned in her work. They had one son, Marcus Hannah, who was brilliant in school and became afflicted with epilepsy which affected his mental capacities before he reached manhood. He was rarely at home except to eat and sleep and was the sole pride and joy of his parents. He never married, possibly because of his affliction. In her home, "Babo" had a large upright victrola with many records of the famous Carter Family Singers and the yodeler, Jimmy Rogers. Marcus passed away November 18, 1979, in a nursing home at Crestview, Florida.
4. Charles Caywood Campbell, b March 4, 1882, married Gertrude Roache formerly from Indiana but was living in Bagdad, Florida at the time. Charles was a gentle, honest, unselfish man with a pleasing personality and always willing to go the last step. In his young manhood, the only employment available was in the yellow pine virgin forest logging industry. The Stearns & Culver Lumber Company bought a lot of timber lands in Walton County, Florida, and built log roads through the forest to remove the logs with an engine and trucks (being a section of pairs of wheels held together mostly by the weight of the logs on the front and rear sections). One day there had been a big rain with heavy winds and the crew was late coming out of the woods when the light on the engine went out. Charles was put on the cow-catcher with a lantern to watch the road for possible washouts or trees across the track. He saw a small tree across the track and yelled to the engineer to stop which was next to impossible in the short distance away from the tree - plus the weight of the load of logs being pulled. As a result one of his feet was crushed so badly that it had to be amputated just above the ankle. For the balance of his life he used a peg leg alternately with a wooden leg for personal locomotion. The company, feeling some responsibility for his future welfare, placed him in the meat department of their supply store at Bagdad, Florida, where he worked until his retirement. Charles and Gertrude had three children: Kenneth, Evalee and Glynn.
5. Effie Campbell, b April 9, 1885, the fourth daughter of "Honest" John and Josephine Baggett Campbell, and Mack Tyner, b November 2, 1879, were married August 25, 1905, by Reverend L. P. Gordon at the home of the bride. They immediately set up housekeeping in a temporary, three room, board and batten shanty with the most meager essentials. During her spare time, Effie made quilts on shares for her mother-in-law from the best parts of worn-out men's pants and any other available materials that came to hand.

As soon as possible, they had some lumber cut and, with the aid of her two brothers, Charles and James, built a three room board and batten house, covered with split boards with an open hall on the 120 acres of land that they were home-steading. Mack worked several years for his father for $8.00 per week and, by living frugally, they managed to save a little money which they invested in a milk cow, a mule and some farming tools. Prior to this purchase they had used his father's mule to make and cultivate a garden. They always had a garden, sufficient hogs raised in the woods and fattened on chufas or peanuts, to provide the annual supply of home cured meat along with some chickens which provided some food and eggs for cash market. They worked constantly to avoid debt.

All of their four children were born in the original house, some without medical assistance. As the children grew older, they built another larger room to the front of the house which, at one time, served as a bedroom as well as storage space, in one corner, for cotton on which the children romped and played. Their children attended annual four-month school in the community of Central. The school term usually began the first Monday following the Fourth of July. Oftentimes the teacher lived with different people who would keep him or her a part of and sometimes all of the term. When the school term ended at Central, if there was school in session at Piney Grove School, the children attended that school until its termination. They were determined that their children should have a good education and become leaders, if possible, in the upbuilding of the community as well as having expertise in all phases of farming and ranching, including the tilling of the soil and harvesting the crops. Effie believed in hard work and that "idle hands were the devil's workshop." She was a very strict disciplinarian and believed in attending strictly to her own business and not to meddle into the affairs of others.

Gradually over the years, they expanded the small farm operation, and since Mack's father had a saw mill and a turpentine business, Mack worked himself into the turpentine business by renting or leasing timber from other people, when he could, and used his own timber as well. The neighbors were bad to burn the woods or open range in the fall, winter or early spring so that there would be spring grazing for their cattle. This promiscuous range burning forced Mack to hoe and clear around each turpentined tree a space of about four feet from the base of the tree to prevent the face of the tree from catching fire and thereby destroying the turpentine, called scrape that had dried on the face of the tree, as well as the trees. The older children helped to rake and clean around the trees in the fall and winter. On the farm, in the early years of their marriage, the only cash crops were cotton, eggs, and an occasional hog or cow.

All of the children completed High School and distributed among them are: one doctoral, 2 masters and 4 bachelors degrees.

A. Mayme Tyner, b March 15, 1906, married Richard Eugene Pilcher, December 23, 1934, (divorced) and had one daughter, Sara Jane, b February 10, 1938 and married Ph.D. Kay Marvin Eoff, the son of R. K. and Gladys Bergvall Eoff, June 19, 1965. They live in Gainesville, Florida, where he is a Professor at the University of Florida. Mayme, the eldest, majored in Education, having won a competitive scholarship and taught in the Public Schools of West Florida for 27 years. She received her A.B. degree in 1930. Following this, she was a registered Real Estate Broker for some 20 years.

Mack and Effie were the first Republican County Committeeman and woman from Okaloosa County to the State Executive Committee. Mayme became interested in politics and served 12 years (1956-1968) as Secretary of the Republican State Executive Committee of Florida and as Assistant Secretary for an additional four years. During this time, she was a Delegate from Florida to the National Republican Conventions of 1956, 1960 and 1968. Her father was a Delegate to the 1956 Convention which met in San Francisco. In 1964, Mayme served as an Alternate to the Convention. Sara Jane Pilcher, Mayme's daughter, was a page in the 1956 Convention.

- B. Pearl Tyner majored in Food and Nutrition at Florida State College for Women, graduating in 1930. This institution later became co-ed and was named Florida State University. She served a Dietetic Internship at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, Illinois. She taught Home Economics in high school for a few years, then was Home Economist for the Florida Light and Power Company prior to becoming a Dietitian with the Veterans' Administration, holding stations in Columbia, S.C., Bronx, New York, Leavenworth and Wichita, Kansas and Alexandria, La. Then she enlisted as a Dietitian in the Medical Corps of U. S. Army with the rank of Second Lieutenant and spent approximately three years in the European Theater of Action in World War II. She was discharged as a Captain. Then she returned to the Veterans' Administration serving in Ashville, North Carolina and Kennedy General Hospital, Memphis, Tennessee, from which she retired at age 50. Since retirement she worked hard and diligently with a ranching operation on the family farm and is devoting much time and energy with the local Historical Society and Museum.
- C. Daughter, Annie Marie, b January 2, 1910, majored in Education, graduating from Florida State College for Women in 1935 and was a Public School teacher in Jackson County, Florida until her retirement. She was married twice; first to C. B. Conrad, an Engineer with the State Road Department with issue of a son, Connie Mack Conrad who was adopted by her second husband, H. T. Sowell, an electrician with issue of a daughter, Annette. Annette married Thomas Maleszewski. Annie and H. T. made their home in Chipley, Florida.
- D. Mack and Effie's only son, Mack Tyner Jr., b February 1, 1916, married Carolyn Vidal, b June 21, 1921, daughter of Adolphe L. and Callie Smith Vidal, June 14, 1946. Carolyn graduated from Flora MacDonald College in 1943 with a double major in violin and Public School Music. She taught Public School Music in North Carolina and Alachua County, Florida. Mack Jr. attended the University of Florida where he obtained a B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering. He attended the University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio, where he received his Masters and Doctorial Degrees in 1941. He began his career with Kimberley-Clark Paper Company, Appleton, Wisconsin, followed by joining Armour Research Foundation, Chicago, Illinois. He and another researcher discovered the process for treating paper containers to allow them to hold, keep or store gasoline. He was refused admission in the military service during World War

II and returned to the University of Florida for research. Shortly he entered the teaching profession where he has remained and will remain until retirement.

- a. Ruth Lynn Tyner, b November 27, 1949, married Michael James Redmon, b. October 3, 1941, March 5, 1975. She attended the University of Florida where she obtained B.A. degree in Music, Master of Engineering in Industrial Engineering, and her Ph.D. degree in Quantum Chemistry. She is now doing computer calculations in the Quantum Theory at Battelle Laboratories, Columbus, Ohio.
- b. Mack Tyner III, b July 7, 1951, married Paula Robinson, b May 8, 1951, daughter of Paul and Lottie Robinson, May 3, 1975. Mack III attended the University of Florida and graduated with B.A. degree in mathematics. Then he entered the Medical School and received an M.D. in Family Practice of Medicine in May, 1978 and served four years at the Trover Clinic, Madisonville, Kentucky. Their son, Benjamin Paul was born June 29, 1980. They returned to Archer, Florida in June 1982, where he is working at Lake City Emergency Room.
- c. Grace Nell Tyner, b March 17, 1953, married Dennis James Fearon, b January 13, 1948, son of John and Ellen Fearon, Canton, Ohio, August 10, 1977. She is attending University of Texas, Austin, Texas, and working in the field of Geology for her Ph.D.

COUNTRY LIVING IN THE EARLY 1900's

Mack and Effie Tyner lived on what could well have been called "The Back Forty." Our music, particularly at night, was that of the screech owl, who would make us shiver with his spine chilling noises, the swamp angels, whippoorwills, croaking of the frogs and the chirping of crickets in their respective seasons. The "L" shaped house was built throughout from rough "sawn" pine boards and erected in board and batten fashion with a split board roof. The floor was made from the same identical wide boards which developed cracks between in the drying process. The fireplace, with a window on each side, was in the end of the room next to the kitchen. In cool or cold weather one could feel the cold air coming through those cracks not filled with dust, sand and other small debris. The house had no overhead ceiling (or the sides) for several years. About 1922 they obtained waste and scrap lumber from a nearby saw mill and put board and batten overhead, thereby helping to make home a little more comfortable in cold weather.

On the right side of the fireplace during cool or cold weather evenings, our father would place a cowhide bottomed chair (which was the only kind that we had) on the floor in a reclining position to relax on the floor and play with the children. The floor was cleaned by using a weak lye water solution, a generous sprinkling of sand and the vigorous back and forth motion with a home made scrub from corn shucks. The scrubbing process was followed by a generous water rinse with much of the water escaping through the cracks. The excess water remaining on the floor was partially picked up with any old rag or burlap sack no longer usable in other ways.

About the only cleanser or soap available was "home made" lye soap made by using one or more balls of lye coated with rosin dissolved in a wash pot. This was boiled with a limited amount of water, together with the waste fats from the kitchen and "cracklins" from the annual hog butchering season. It was usually somewhat dark in color and was tainted with the pungent odor of lye. Before this generation, lye was obtained by burning oak wood, collecting the ashes in a cloth or porous container and keeping the contents wet with water to dissolve the potash and collect the drippings for home use. Toilet or sweet scented soaps were rarely available as well as too expensive to use considering the lack of available funds for such purposes. The first bought soap that we ever used was bar shaped and called "Octagon." We took special care of the octagon soap. At soap making time, the children were exceedingly curious about the process of saponification in the seething mass of froth and bubbles. The processor was kept busy with almost constant stirring to prevent the pot's boiling over and the adding of small bits of water to get the correct consistency for hardening when cold. After hardening, the soap would be cut into irregular shaped chunks with a little water added to encourage slipping loose from the pot and placed on a board for keeping in a dry place. After drying, the soap became quite hard and the family was not so wasteful with the hard soap as with the softer stage.

Entertainment in the community consisted of candy drawings, cake walks, and box suppers usually held either at someone's home or at the church which also served as school. At home children were successful improvisors----worn out and discarded socks and stockings were unraveled and made into a ball with the thread using a small rock as the center. To prevent the balls from unwinding in use, they were sewn several times around as well as back and forth through the ball to enhance its lasting qualities. At home and at school the children would choose sides and throw the ball back and forth over the house or building; if caught by a team member on the opposite side, the team would run around to the competing side to try to tag a new member with the ball for their own team thereby reducing or decimating the opposing team and increase the membership of the competing team whenever possible.

Stick frog was another game played in soft dirt when a pocket knife, with the largest blade open, was tossed, thrown or dropped from or in certain positions to land upright with the blade in the dirt. Otherwise, the competitor won the use of the knife to prove his skills.

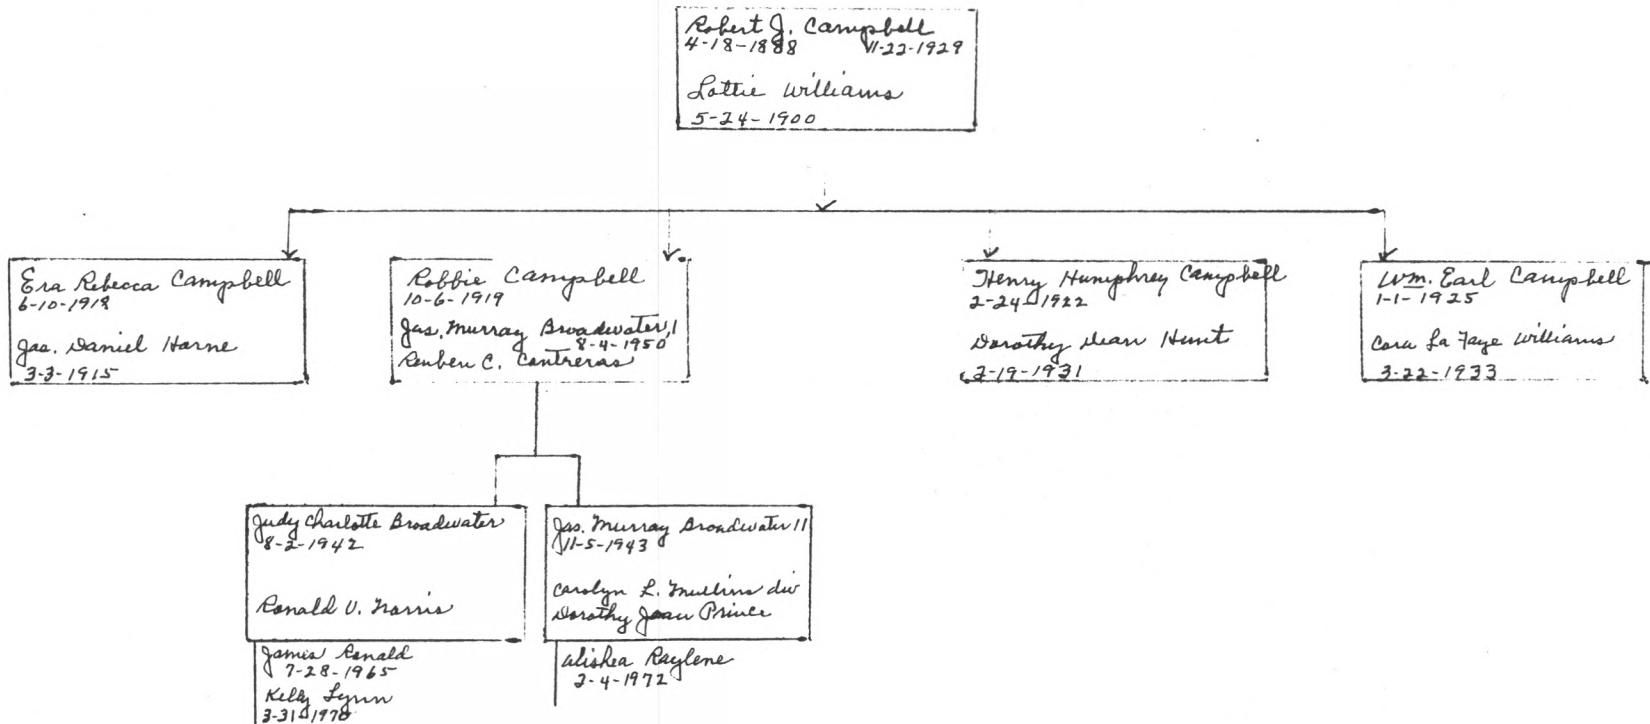

"Catty Bat," played with the home made ball, consisted of two players each with a fitting board or stick about $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 feet in length standing about 20 to 30 feet apart and facing each other with a catcher behind each batter to retrieve missed balls and throw the ball to the opposite batter. As many as a dozen or more persons could participate in this game with the person catching the ball either on the fly or first bounce exchange or replace the batter with the contest continuing, hopefully, until everyone had an opportunity at the bat. At school, one of the boys was so clumsy that he was never able to catch flies or bounces and he would always eat his lunch at school so quickly that he abused his stomach in order to be the first one to bat.

"Town Ball" was a sort of mini-baseball game that was great sport with a sizeable crowd when trees, fence corners or some other object constituted the base. What would children of today do with themselves in this era without the benefits of modern transportation, entertainment, drive-in eateries, drugs or whatever? If they are bored today with all of the modern entertainment, where would they be in our early surroundings?

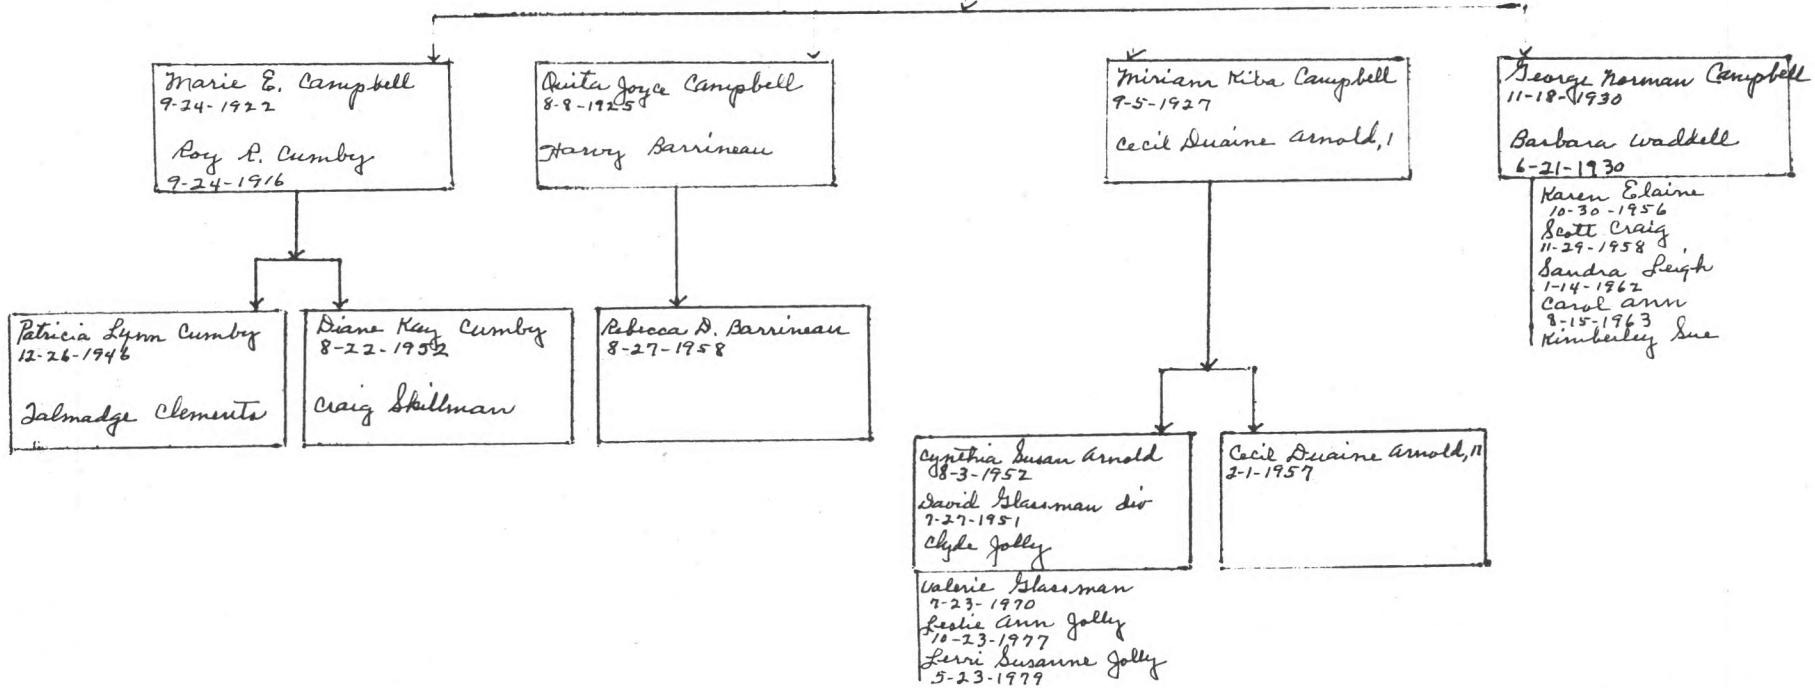

In promoting good family health, nothing was more dependable and reliable than faithful "old Nell" when hitched to the Jersey Wagon to take the family on its annual trek for typhoid fever shots. The driver always sat on the springboard seat with, usually, another adult while the children occupied the back of the wagon, often with their feet dangling toward the ground and frequently with bare toes touching the ground.

The farm operation grew gradually through thrift and hard work from a homestead site into some 900 acres in farm and timberland over their lifetime. Sugar cane syrup, cotton, turpentine products, and some livestock were the basis for income and expansion. In the fall of 1926 they moved into the vacated sawmill office and boarding house prior to the building of a six bedroom, 1½ story frame house where the family currently resides, three miles south of Laurel Hill, Florida, on state road #85. The family burial plot is Almarante Cemetery located about two miles north of the homesite on highway #85.

JAMES CAMPBELL
Submitted by: Miriam Keba Campbell

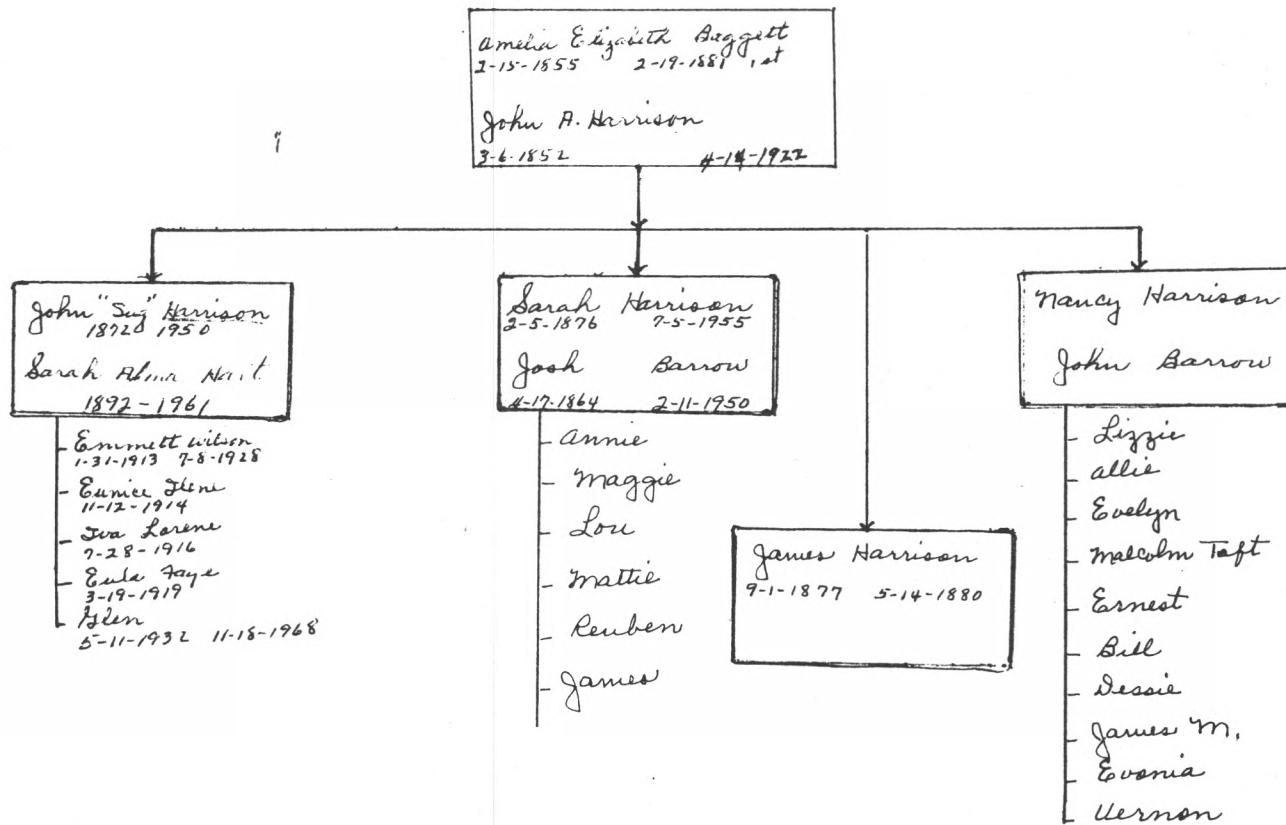

James Campbell, b November 26, 1890, married Pauline Polly Spears, b October 14, 1895. James is a rather small, slender, eager type of man with a great sense of humor. He followed public work in the forest with logging companies for a number of years, even going to Mississippi where he contracted some disease that almost cost him his life. He was a proficient skidder operator as well as having native mechanical ability to keep up the repair on the firm's operating equipment. Later, he went with the L & N RR Co., Pensacola, Florida, as an electrician, mechanic and heavy equipment operator where he was employed until his retirement in 197-. During World War II on many occasions, he worked numerous 24-hour shifts operating the coal tipple which is a mechanical device for picking up and inverting the loaded coal cars. The contents were emptied into the hold of ships which were destined for the American Allies overseas.

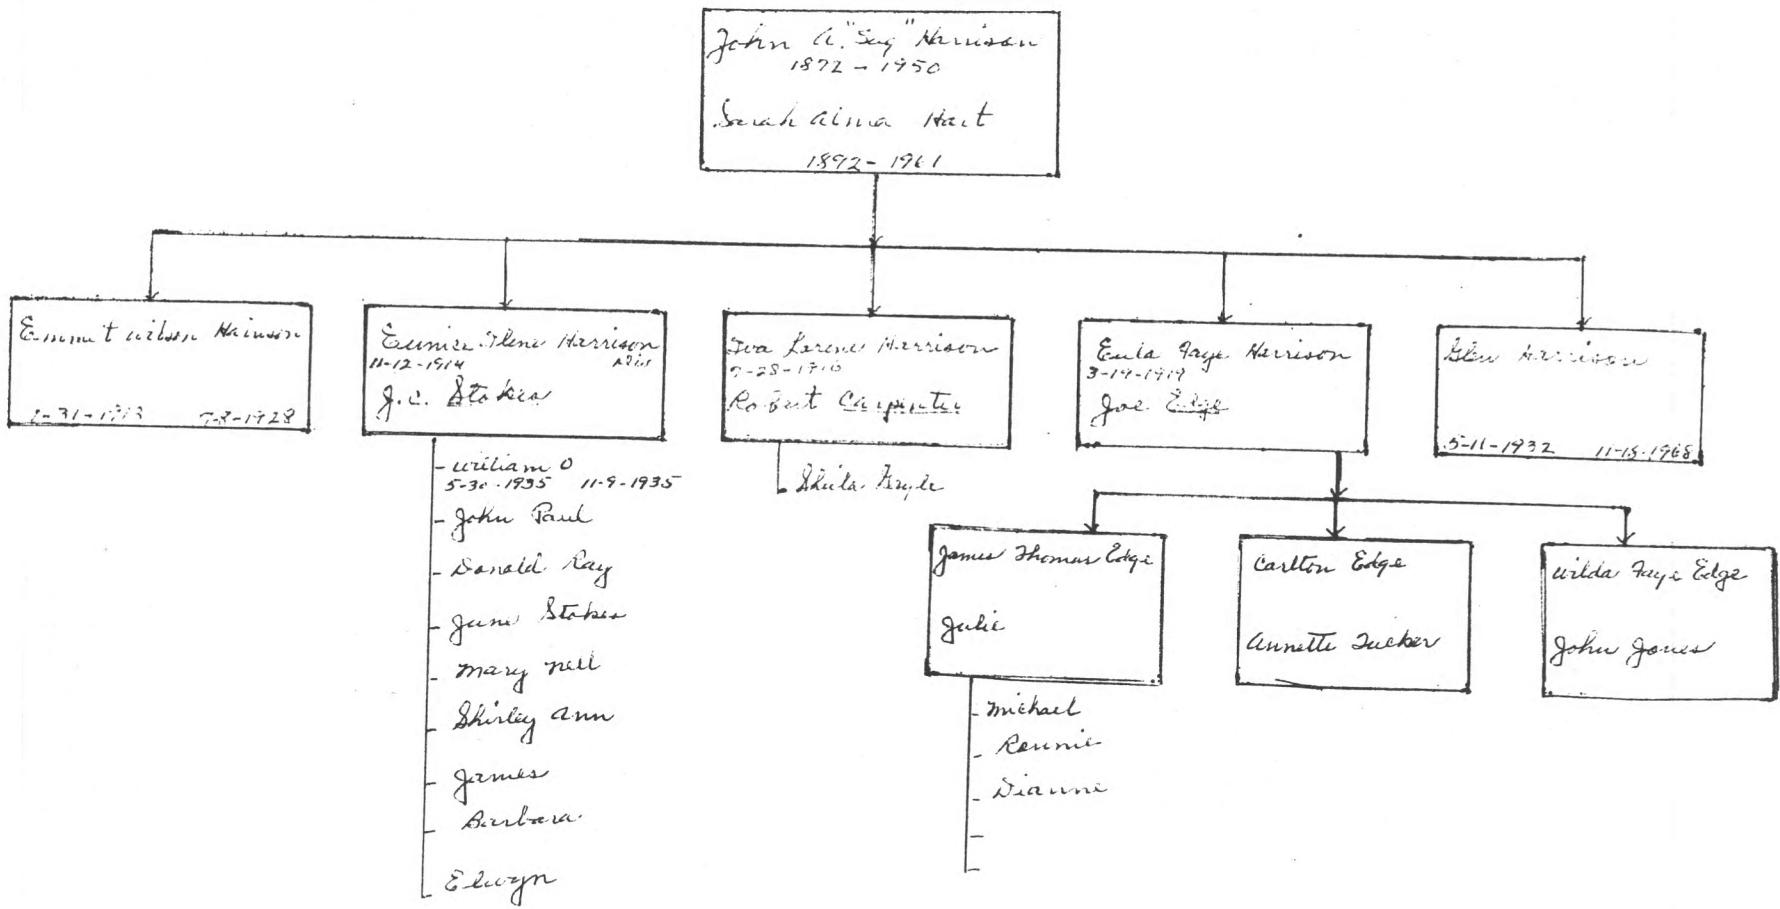

James and Polly have four children, three daughters and one son. The children always came first in their lives even above their own relationships. They were extremely good parents and tried to instill in their children the virtues of thrift as well as the advantages of living a good but simple life.

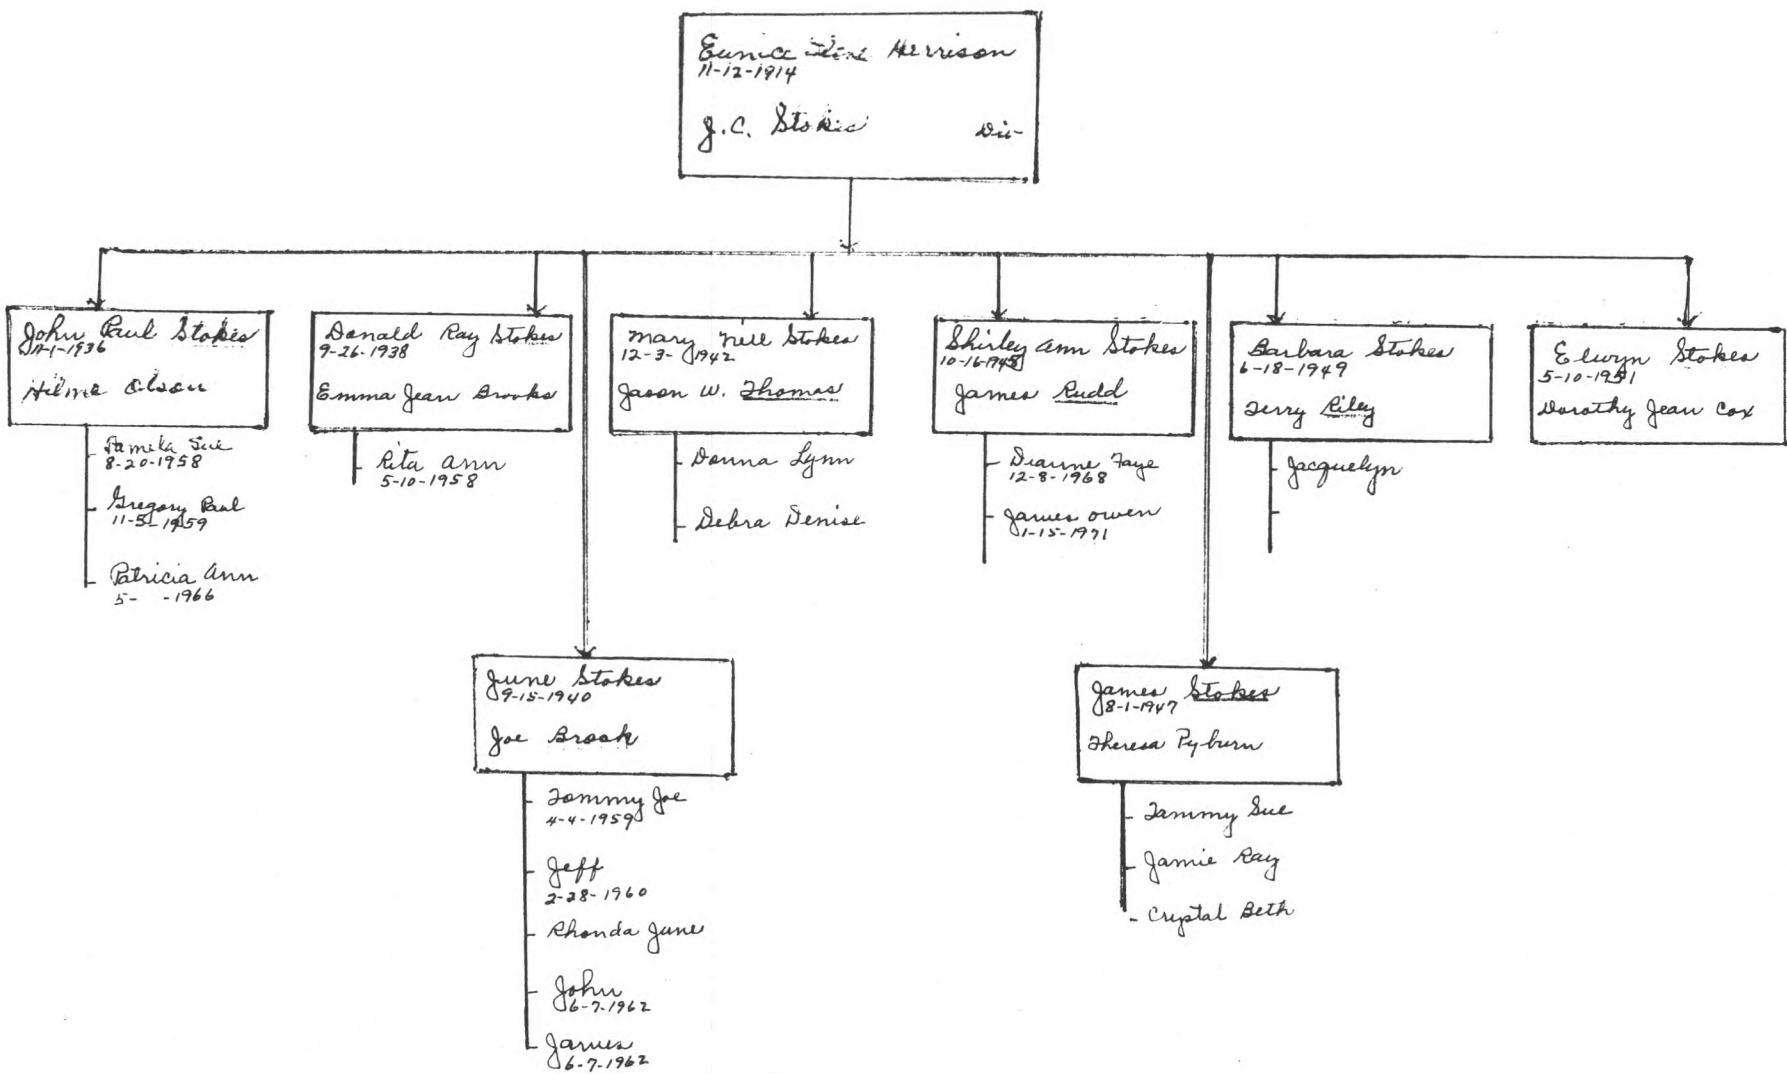

- A. Marie, b September 24, 1922, married Roy Cumby, b September 24, 1916, January 13, 1946. Marie was the dutiful daughter and always did what was expected of her. She has always been a lady but she discovered later in life that she could be herself and not be too attentive to what others expected of her. She attended Huntington College, majored in Home Economics and worked a few years prior to getting married. Roy Cumby was stationed in Pensacola in the Navy during World War II when Marie met him. After being married in Pensacola, Florida, they moved directly to High Point, North Carolina, where he worked and retired from the Post Office Department.
 - a. Patricia Lynn Cumby, b December 26, 1946, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, holding a Master's degree in Chemistry. She has a fantastic career with Monsanto Chemical Co., St. Louis, Missouri. Her job is to take the raw product and convert into a salable product. She is divorced from Talmadge Clemens.
 - b. Diane Kay Cumby, b August 22, 1952 is married to Craig Skillman of North Carolina and they have two children. Kay graduated from the University of North Carolina in the field of Home Economics majoring in foods. She is currently Chief Dietitian at High Point Hospital, High Point, North Carolina.
- B. Ouita, b August 8, 1925, married Harvey H. Barrineau, Jr., b July 24, 1926, October 8, 1949. After ten years, they were divorced. They had a daughter, Rebecca Dale, b August 27, 1958. Ouita is quite shy, sensitive and holds an idealistic view of the world and becomes unduly frustrated when others fail to measure up to her ideals. She is a graduate of Florida State University, 1947, with a B.S. degree and is a Registered Medical Technologist and has been employed by the Florida State Board of Health in Pensacola, Florida, since graduation. Her daughter, Rebecca is currently attending Pensacola Junior College.
- C. Miriam Keba "Pie," b September 5, 1927, married Cecil Duaine Arnold April 14, 1951 and they have two children. Miriam graduated from Florida State University with B.S. degree in 1949 and M.S. degree in 1972. For 12 years she taught at Pensacola High School and part time at Pensacola Junior College, followed by four years as Administrative Dean at Pensacola High School. Since 1974, she has served as Supervisor for Business Education, Distributive Education and Health Occupations for the Escambia County School Board. Miriam is an independent, maverick type of person who asserted her independence early with a great deal of pain. She is challenged by responsibility and leaves no doubt as to her feelings and positions about people and situations.

- a. Cynthia Susan Arnold, b August 3, 1952, attended Florida State University but preferred marriage to graduation. Her marriage to David Glassman ended in divorce with one child, Valerie. Cynthia's second marriage is to Clyde Jolly, January 15, 1977. Their first child, Leslie Ann, b October 23, 1977, has defective kidneys. After two major operations, everything seems to have been corrected. Their other daughter, Lerri Suzanne, b May 23, 1979, one month prematurely, spent her first 30 days in the Intensive Care Unit at Children's Hospital --- Sacred Heart Hospital, Pensacola, Florida. She is a real trooper with an I.Q. of 125. Clyde Jolly completed Junior College at San Antonio, Texas, his home town, and is now an electrician for Marathon Oil Company of Louisiana.
 - b. Cecil Duaine Arnold II, b February 1, 1957, is completing a course in Respiratory Therapy in December, 1980. He has attended Pensacola Junior College and Florida State University. He is a little shy but a down-to-earth type of person.
- D. George Norman Campbell, b November 18, 1930, attended Florida State University and Auburn University. On December 20, 1955, he married Barbara Waddell, a graduate of Florida State University, and an Elementary School teacher from Pensacola. Norman has always liked flying and is currently a helicopter pilot. He served as a pilot in the United States Marine Corps where he attained the rank of Captain. Norman and Barbara have five children:
- a. Karen Elaine, b October 30, 1956, and is attending Louisiana State University
 - b. Scott Craig, b November 29, 1958
 - c. Sandra Leigh, b January 14, 1962
 - d. Carol Ann, b August 15, 1963
 - e. Kimberly Sue, b December 29, 1964.

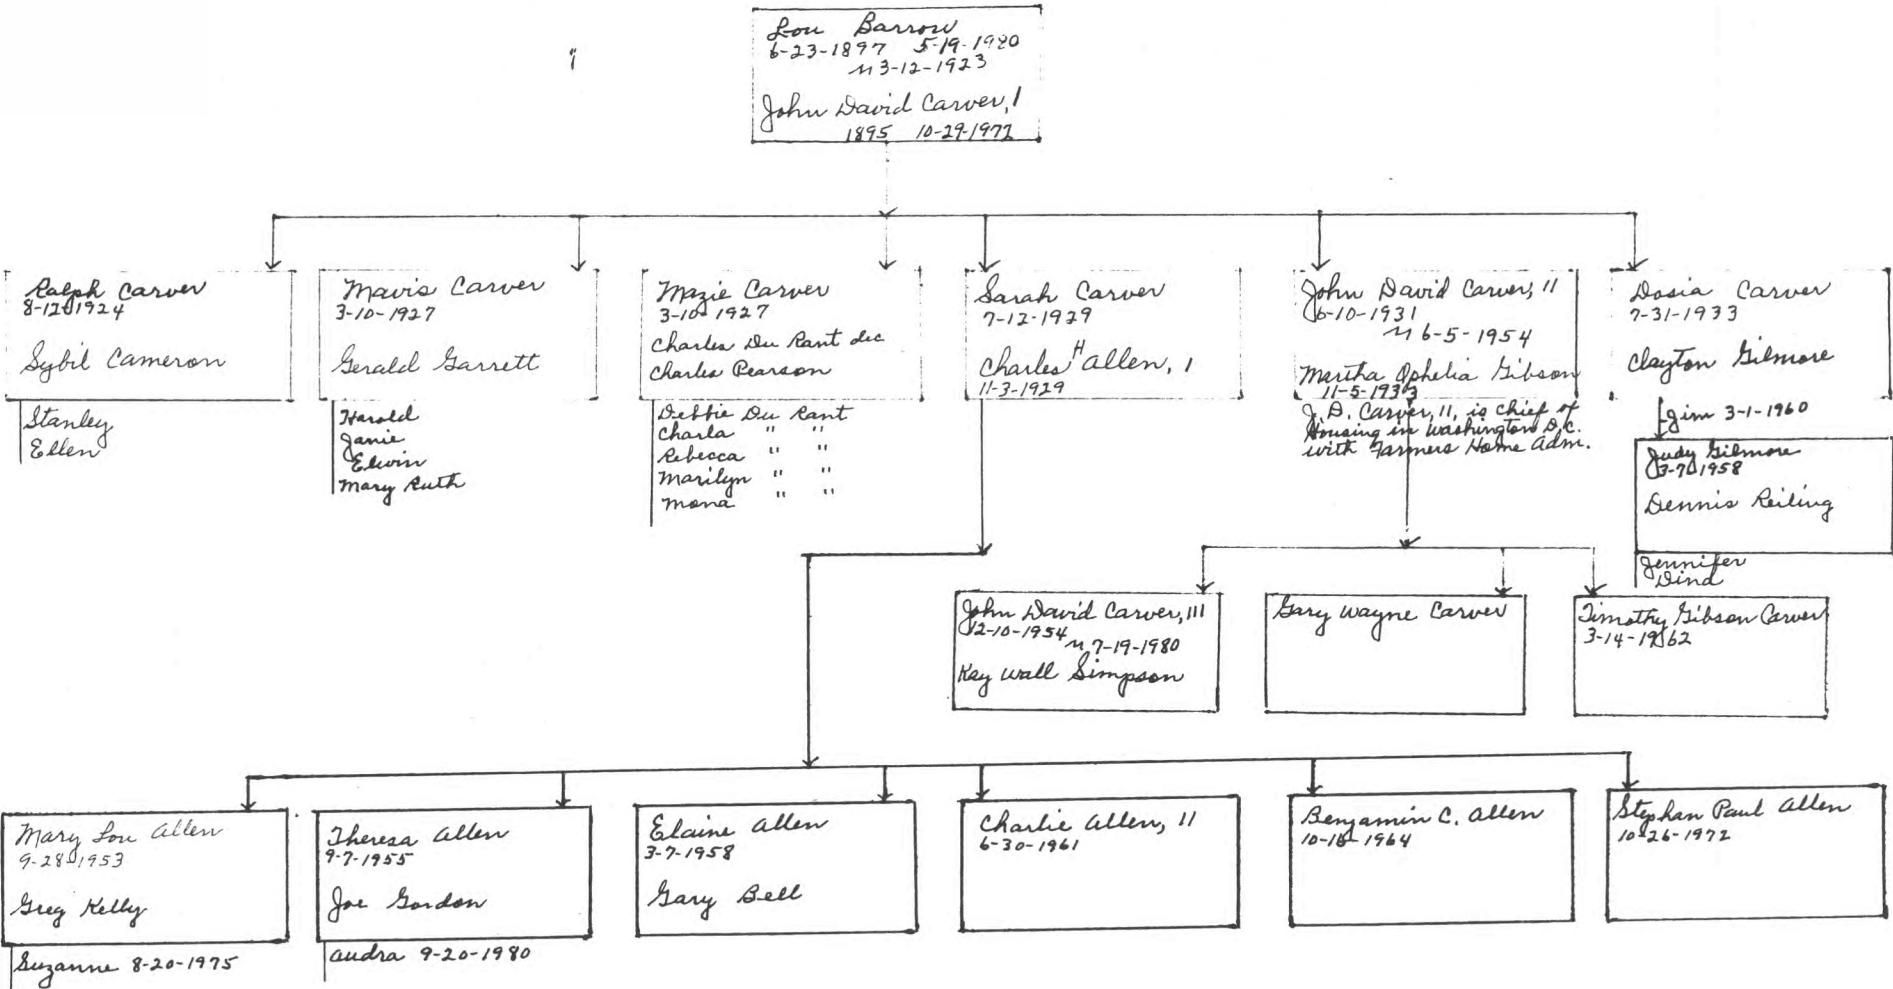

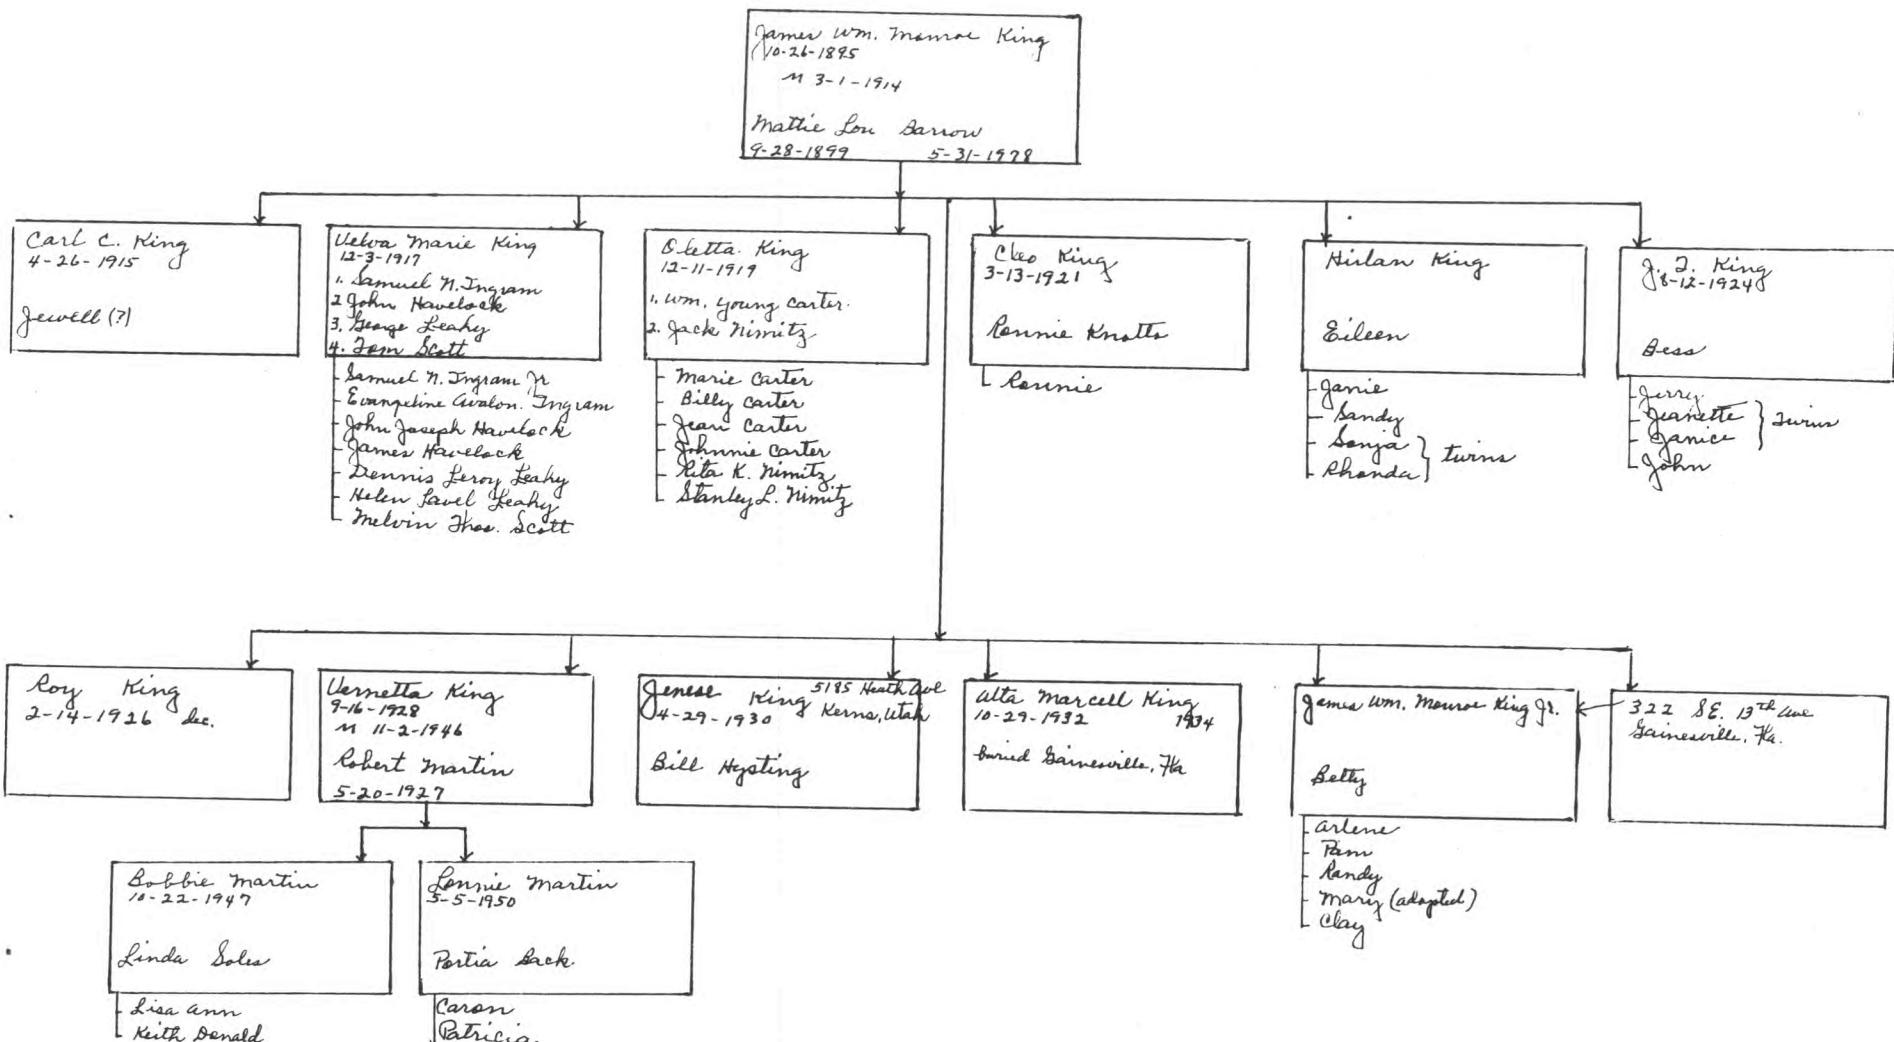

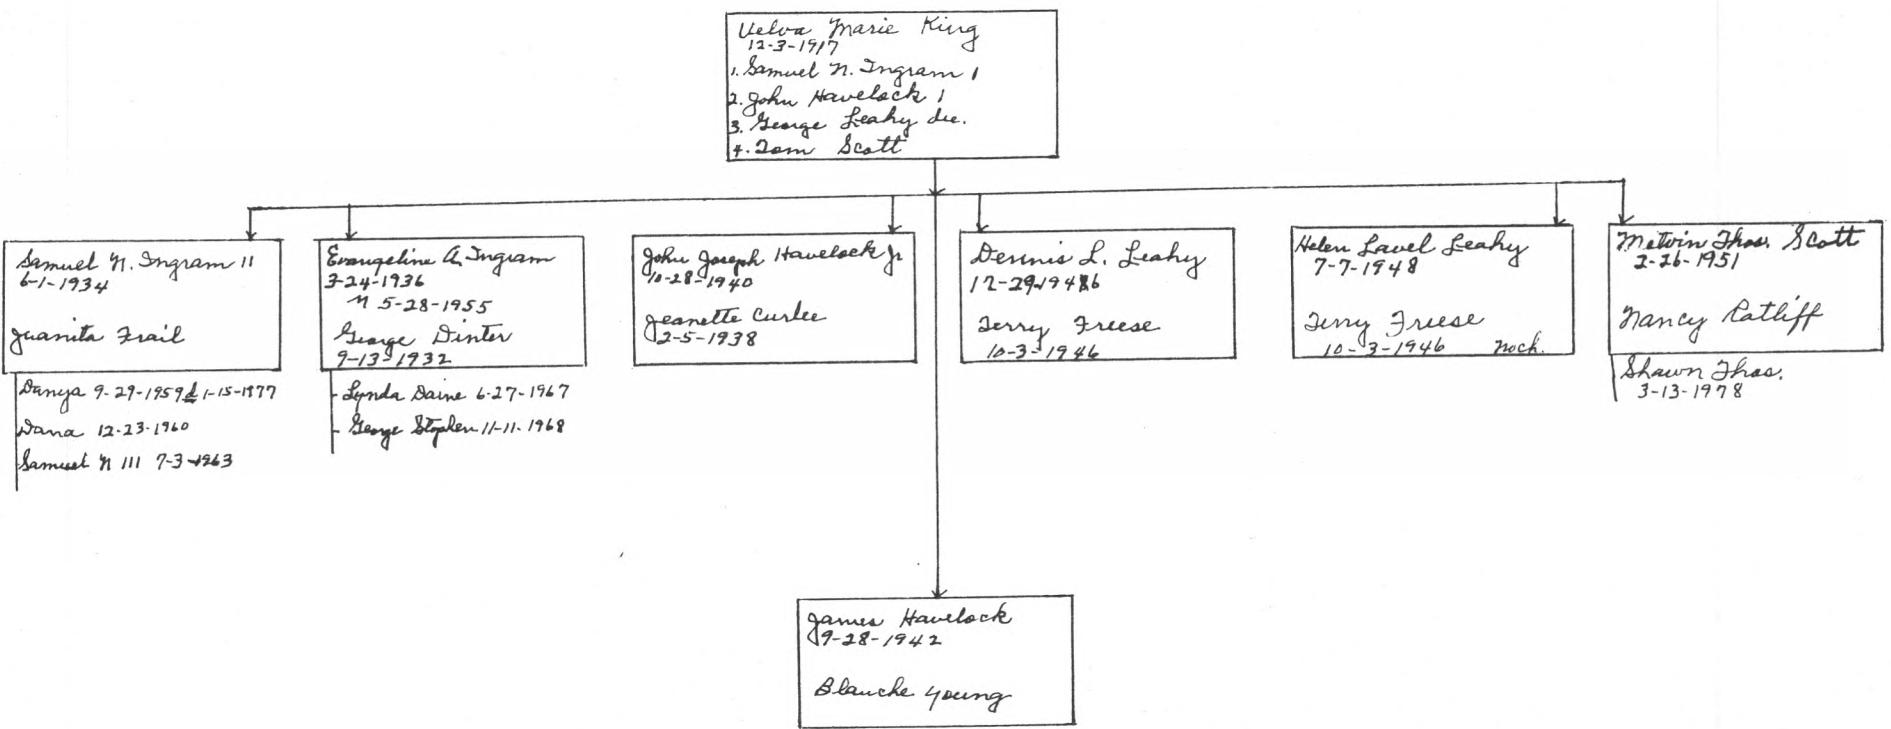

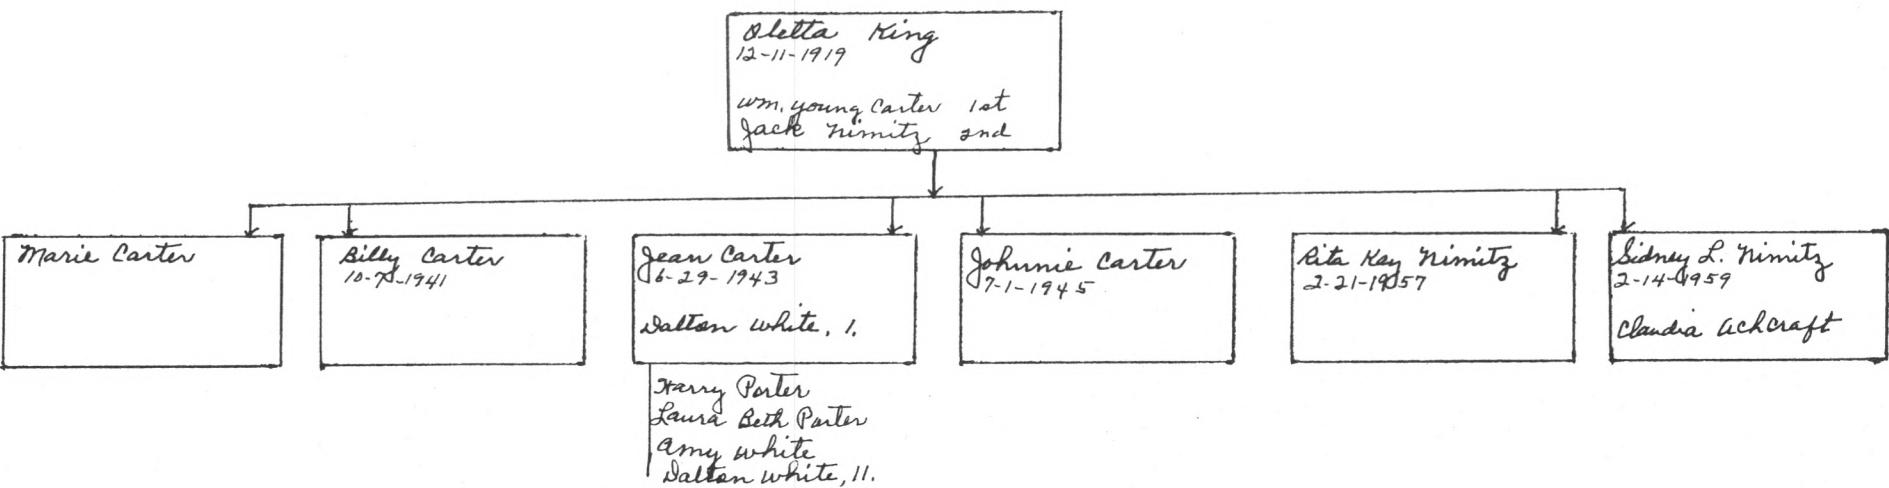

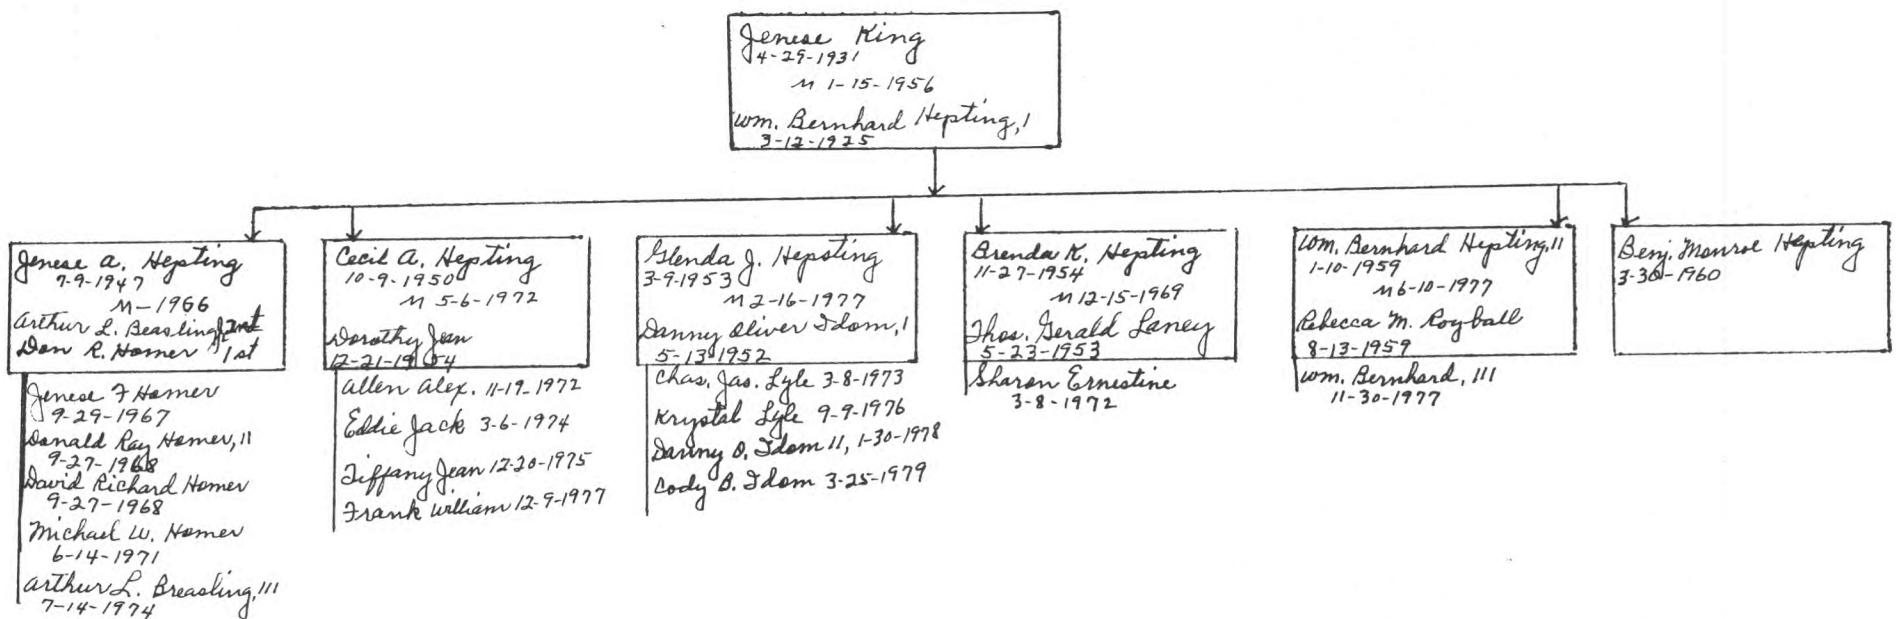

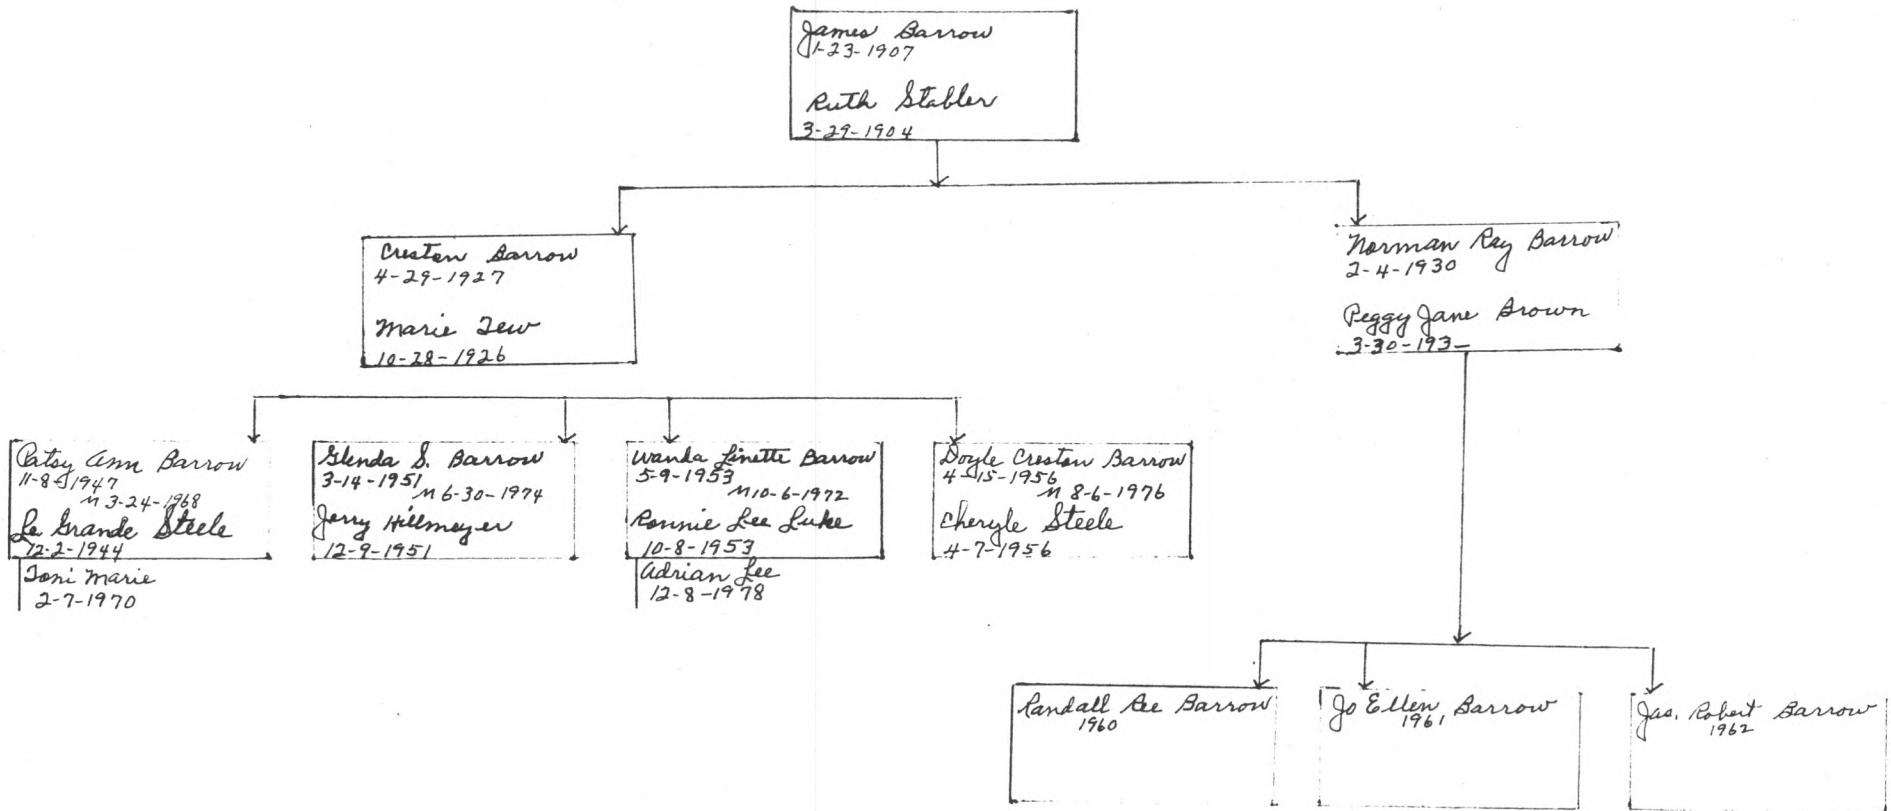

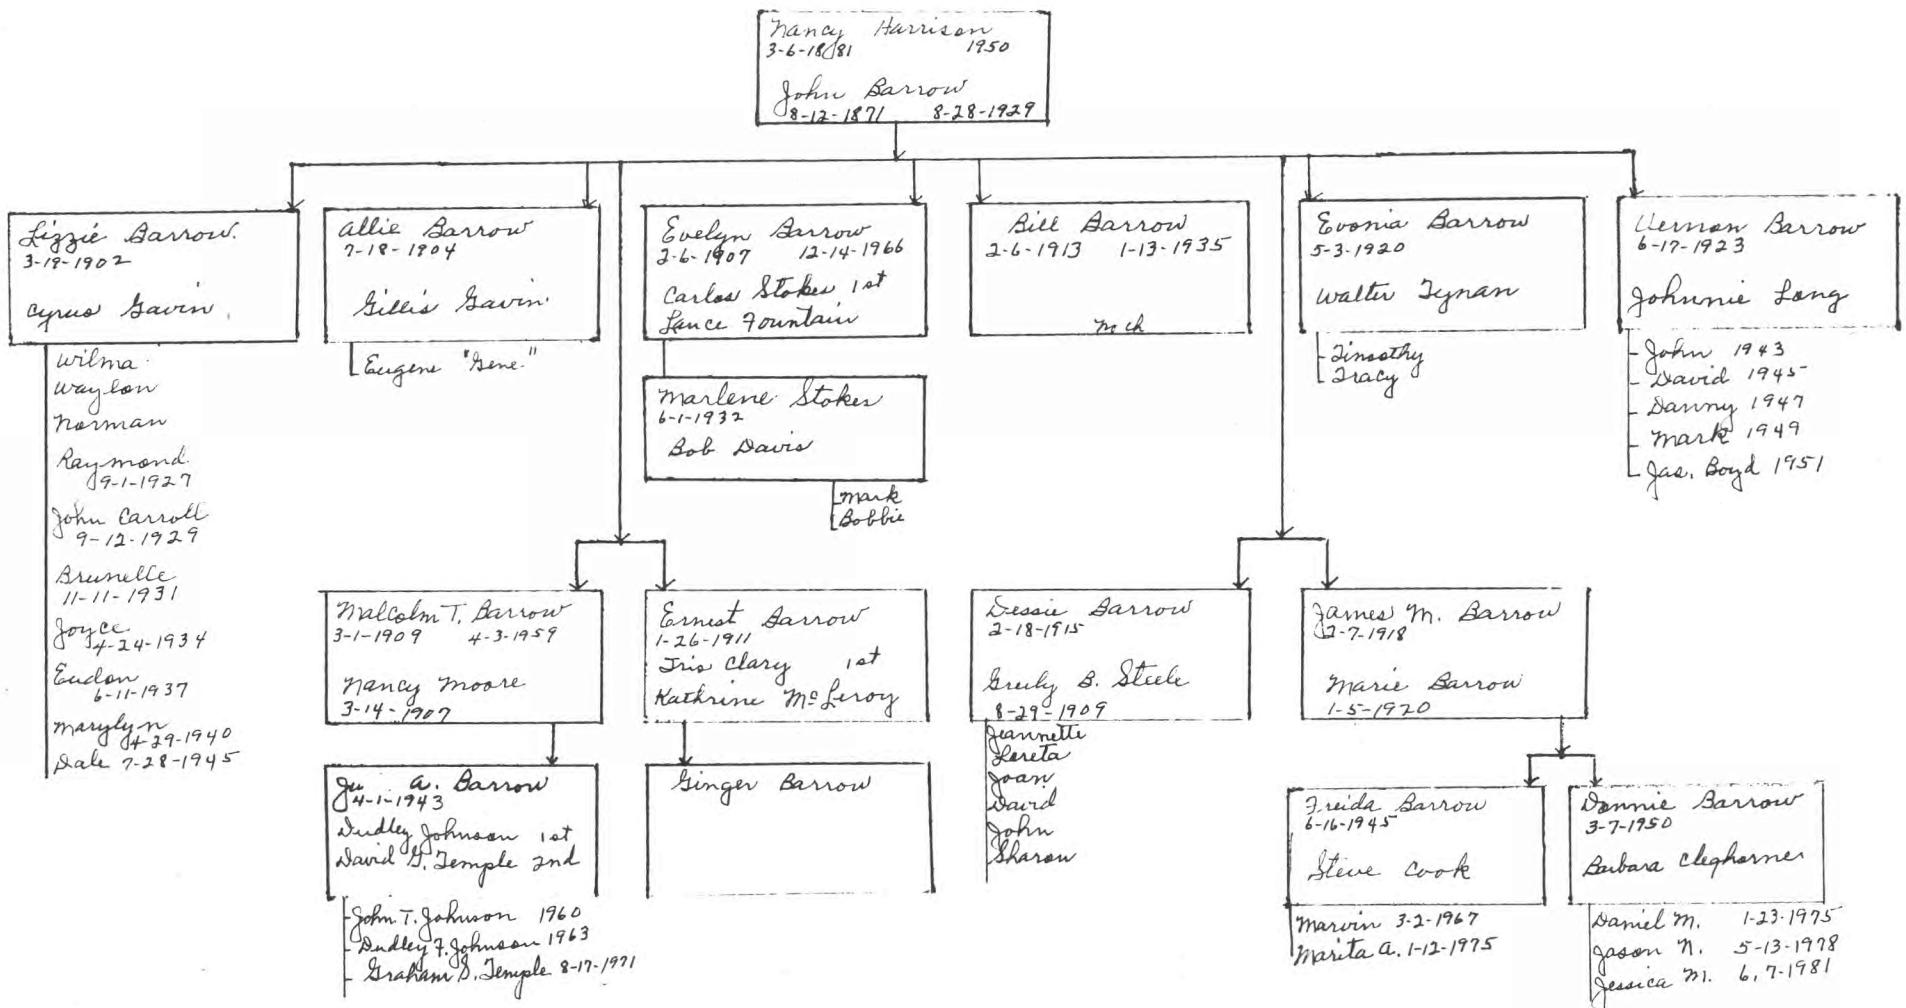

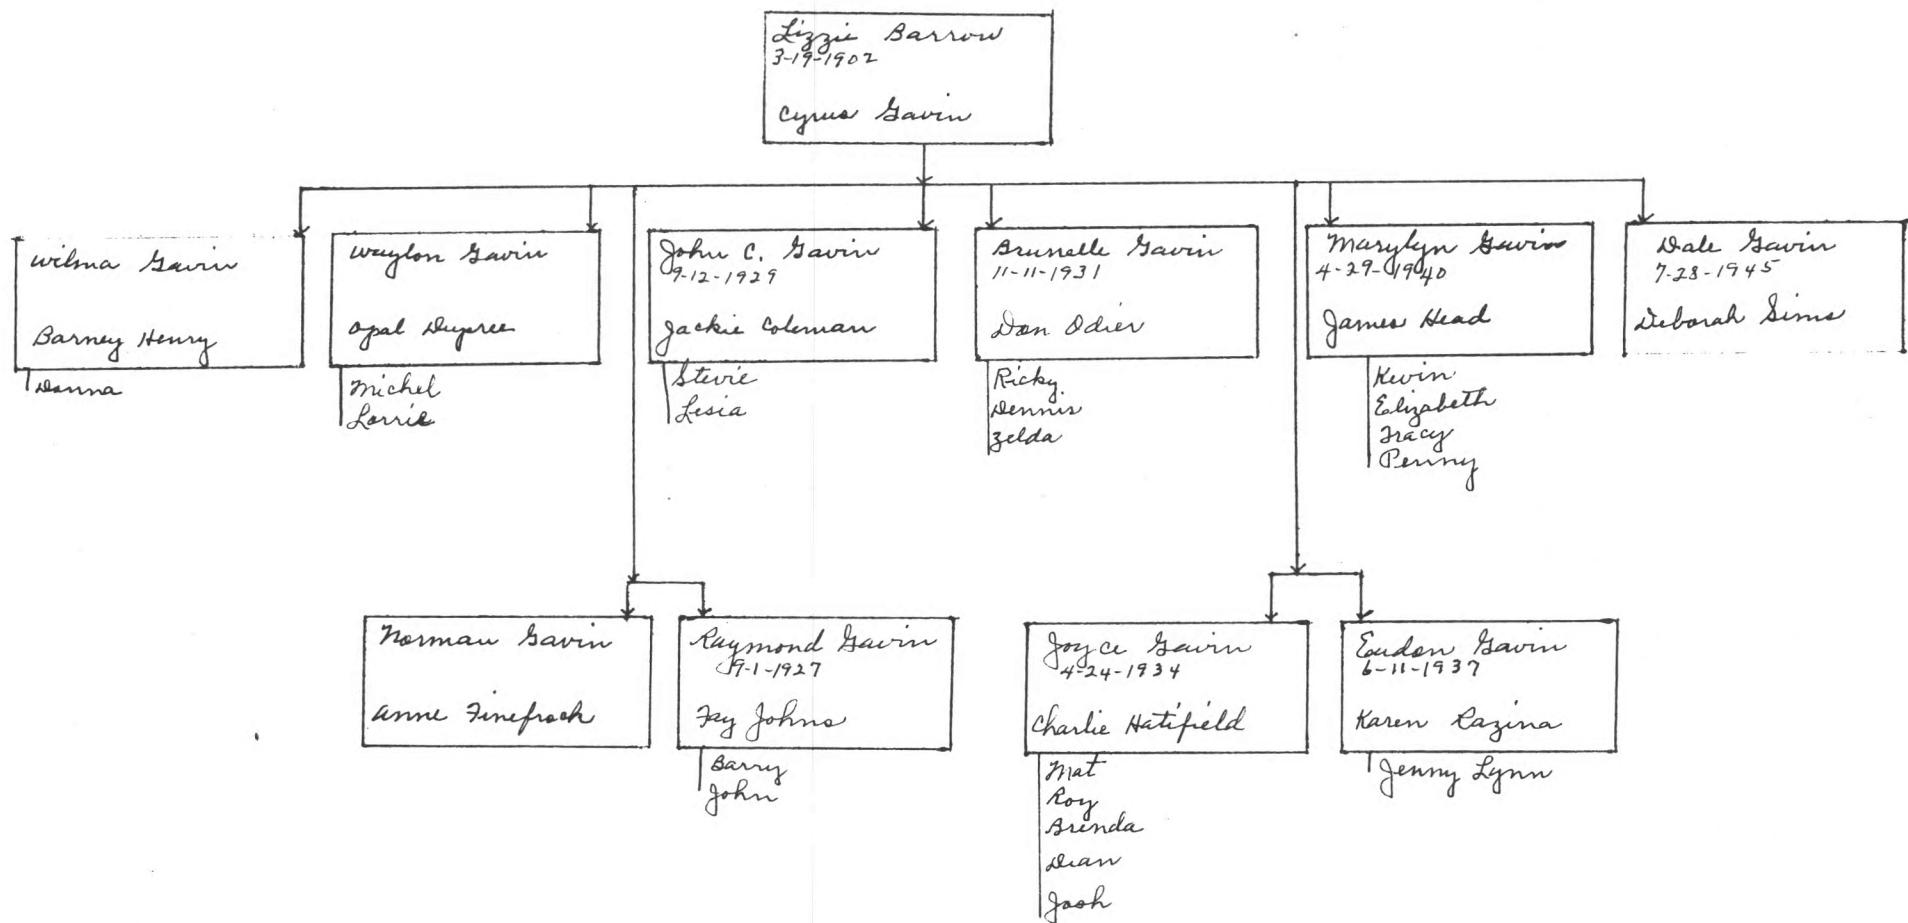

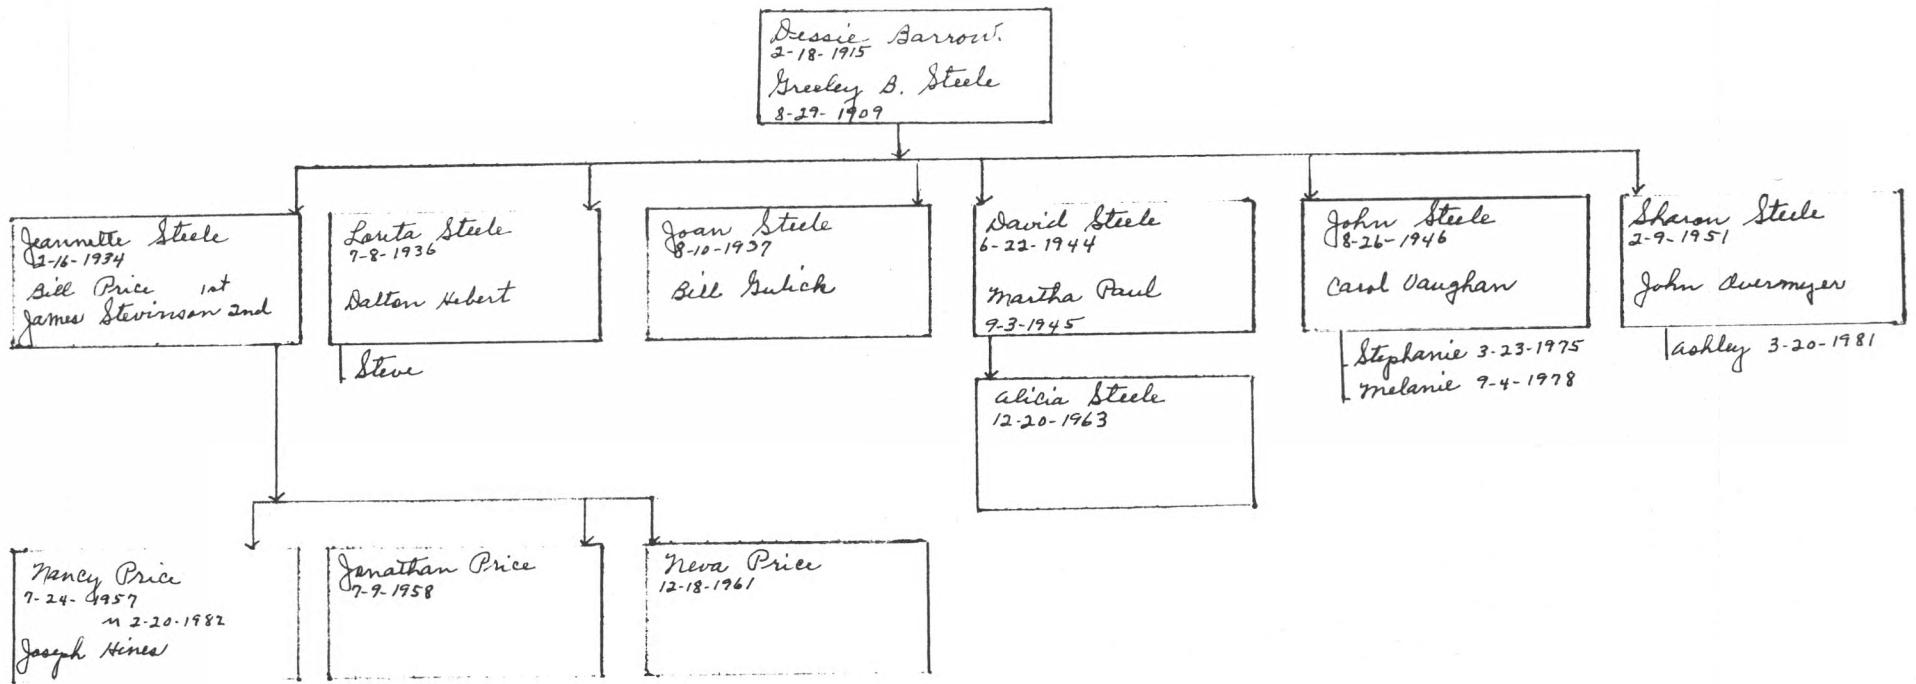

In a letter to the author, Jeneese King Hepting says, "I was married once before but was divorced. All of my children are legally adopted under the name of Hepting in the year 1962. So, all records are under the name Hepting. I was married to Cecil Alexander Canady Sept. 29, 1946 and divorced 1954."
